Job Insurance and Old Age Pensions.

New York, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A cooperative management-employe plan to help eliminate [illegible] employment, stabilize business, and remove the worker's fear of [illegible], illness, and old age was placed before industry tonight by Gerard Swope, president of General Electric company.

Addressing the National Manufacturers' association, Mr. Swope termed industry a great art to forestall legislation which he said, threatens the fundamental structure of American business and society.

Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of General Electric, who frequently has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate, also spoke at the meeting and praised Mr. Swope for his courage in advancing the plan.

GERARD SWOPE.

Some Debatable Points.

"The plan is not free from criticism," he added. "There are grave questions, both of public and business policy, lying at its very foundation. Its significance, however, does not lie in possible criticism of the plan, but in the fact that a responsible industrial manager is ready to put to the public an offer to assume voluntary responsibilities of vast consequence, not only in the economic but in the social field."

"Industry exists basically for serving the needs of the people," Mr. Swope said, "and therefore production and consumption must be coördinated. Shall we wait for society to act through its legislatures or shall industry recognize its obligations to its employés and to the public and undertake the task? Coördination of production is impossible under present plans."

His plan calls for compulsory pensions, unemployment disability and life insurance and workmen's compensation protection the cost to be borne equally by employer and employé. The employé would lose none of the accrued benefits of such protection by switching from one company to another, and if he went into business for himself, returned, or changed his trade, he would receive back all he had paid in, plus interest.

The Stabilization Method.

The stabilization of industry would be brought about through the compulsory formation by law of trade associations in virtually every business and industry. These groups would have broad powers. They would seek to coördinate production and consumption by controlling each industry's output "on a broader, more intelligent basis, thus tending to regularize employment."

The groups would also play a part in the stabilization of prices and in the control of business ethics and "all matters relating to the growth and development of industry and commerce." They would be in charge of an advisory board composed of representatives of employers, employés, and the public, which in turn would be responsible to a federal supervisory board, such as the federal trade commission.

Bad "Psychology of Fear."

"The psychology of fear must be removed," Mr. Swope said, "and this cannot be done unless the workers have reasonable expectation of protection for their families in case of the breadwinner's death, protection from old age, and protection against unemployment. By protection, I mean protection they themselves help provide.

"Every effort should be made to stabilize industry and therefore stabilize employment, and when this is impracticable, unemployment insurance must be provided and organized industry should take the lead. If the various states act, industry will be confronted with different solutions, lacking uniformity and imposing varying burdens, making competition on a national scale difficult.

"If organized industry is to undertake this work, every effort should be made to preserve the benefits of individual originality, initiative, and enterprise, and to see that the public interests will be protected. This can be done through the agency of the federal government."

The details of the plan follow:

HEITLER 'DEATH LETTER' PUZZLE TO PROSECUTOR

A posthumous letter, dictated by Mike de Pike Heitler, the gangland hanger-on who was slain last April, was the subject of brief comment by State's Attorney Swanson and his chief investigator, Pat Roche, last night.

The Heitler letter, made public suddenly months after its presumed author's death, listed eight men Heitler expected would kill him, and recounted alleged graft collections and gang activities, mainly on the west side. Among other allegations contained in the letter was one that Alfred Lingle, slain reporter for THE TRIBUNE, had been paid $2,500 to have a police captain transferred out of the district in which the foremost gang syndicate was operating.

Swanson Comments on It.

State's Attorney Swanson was interviewed in Atlantic City, where he is attending a meeting of the American Bar association. One Chicago paper had said Mr. Swanson had received the letter and that it later found its way into the hands of Al Capone.

On this point Mr. Swanson said he never heard of the letter—other than the gossip prevalent at the time of Heitler's death that such a letter had been written.

"No such letter ever came into my office," said the prosecutor. "There was some talk of such a letter having been sent to Roche at that time, but I never saw it.

"I am curious to know why such a letter should be made public at this time. I see no good valid reason for such an unsubstantiated document being broadcast just now."

Capone Named in Letter.

If when Heitler, the procurer of women and the informer, was dictating the letter he was inspired by terror of gangsters his fears were justified. A charred body believed to have been his was found on April 23 in the ruins of a burned ice house near Barrington. But as an instrument of vengeance the letter failed.

The document names such gangsters as Al Capone, Lawrence (Dago) Mangano, and other west side hoodlums, and gives the names of those alleged to have been responsible for the murder of another west side vice monger, Jack Zuta. The letter apparently was written eight months before Heitler was slain.

Chief Investigator Roche and other law enforcing authorities point out that the letter has no legal value as far as they are concerned.

Of No Legal Value, Roche Says.

"We cannot even prove that Heitler wrote or dictated such a letter," said Roche. "It is common knowledge that he could not write, except perhaps his own name, which he was taught to do in the penitentiary. A written document such as this has no legal effect unless you can produce the writer of the letter.

"It would be ridiculous for me to call in the hoodlums named in this letter without other evidence. They would laugh at me and tell me to prove that Heitler wrote it or even dictated it to some one else.

Roche Tells of Inquiry.

"I investigated practically all the statements which appear in the so-called Heitler letter. There never was any evidence uncovered to substantiate any of the charges. Whatever the truth may have been as set out in this letter, it does not give anything like a motive for the Lingle murder. I believe I know the motive for that crime, but at present it cannot be proved legally.

"Many rumors of the motive for the Lingle killing were circulated before the Leo Brothers trial, during the trial and after the trial, which resulted in Brothers' conviction. Newspapers gave publication to all these stories, but still there is no question regarding Brothers' guilt. The letter is of no value to me and I do not intend to do anything about it."

Questions Woman on Case.

Roche recalled that at the time of the Heitler murder he questioned Mrs. Emily Melcher, known as Heitler's common law wife, and Coleman Heitler, his brother. He said Mrs. Melcher declared that Heitler had dictated a letter intended for the state's attorney in the event of his death, but that he had destroyed it. Roche said he did not believe this. He denied reports that the letter had been given to him by Heitler's daughter, Mollie, and said that he had never even seen her.

The letter, it develops, is made pub-

YOUTH IS SHOT TO DEATH WHILE PARENTS LOOK ON

While his parents looked on, Angelo Scaccianoce, 16 years old, an auto mechanic, was shot to death last night in front of his home at 1422 Flournoy street.

The slaying followed a dispute with one of three men. The three had left a car in front of the boy's home for repair. One of the men became involved in a dispute with Scaccianoce over a set of brass knuckles which had disappeared from the car and, vowing to return, departed on foot with his companions, leaving the car behind. A few minutes later they reappeared in another car.

One of the men leaped out, slugged Scaccianoce with a revolver, and then shot him down when he resisted. Scaccianoce's father, sitting on the porch with Mrs. Scaccinoce, seized the gunman, but the latter broke away and boarded the waiting machine. He dropped his revolver in his flight and young Scaccianoce, dying, picked it up and fired four shots at him.

RELIEF FROM RECORD HEAT IS DUE TODAY

Cooler weather for today was forecast last night to interrupt the unseasonal heat wave which brought record breaking temperatures to Chicago and the middle west yesterday. Skies will be cloudy today, it is predicted. Tomorrow will be generally fair and slightly warmer.

Yesterday's torrid spell was carried by a southwest wind and was marked by high humidity. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the mercury reached 92 degrees, a Chicago record for this late in the summer. Other previous high temperatures were 94 degrees on Sept. 15, 1927, and 91 degrees on Sept. 18, and Sept. 19, 1895. Yesterday's reading of 92 was the highest for any September date after Sept. 15 in Chicago.

Chicago did not suffer alone in the heat. Des Moines reported 101 at 1 o'clock yesterday. At Iowa City it was 90, and in St. Louis, 96. Kansas City and Wichita reported 98.

Pays $1,200 for Deputy Job; Has 'Seller' Arrested

Paul Polis, 20 years old, 3742 South Paulina street, lost his job two months ago. Shortly afterward he met Chester Grieczak, 30 years old, 2027 West Van Buren street. Grieczak scanned the youth's 6 feet 2 inches and 205 pounds of brawn and told him that he should be a deputy sheriff. If Paul would post a $1,200 bond Grieczak promised to get him the job. Polis put up the amount in cash. The job was slow in coming, and last night Paul, having lost patience, had Grieczak arrested. At the detective bureau it was said the prisoner had a long record as a confidence man.

Texas Senate Tags 'Liar' on Huey P. Long

Austin, Tex., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Shortly after the Texas house of representatives overwhelmingly defeated a bill embodying the principles of the "no cotton" plan of Gov. Huey Long of Louisiana, the senate tonight adopted a resolution terming the state executive a "consummate liar."

The senate resolution continued by asserting Gov. Long's statement that members of the Texas legislature had been bought was "a lie made out of the whole cloth."

After defeating an amendment to couch the resolution in "more decent language" the senate adopted the declaration by a vote of 21 to 7. Supporters of the defeated amendment said Gov. Long's statements were untrue, but they thought the wording of the resolution should be changed.

Charges Members Bought.

The senate action followed a purported Long statement alleging that members of the Texas legislature "have been bought like a sack of corn to vote against the cotton prohibition plan" and that "they have paid them off like a slot machine."

Senator Walter Woodful of Houston said he was for the resolution because "Long is a coward and afraid to come to Texas," and "this is the only way we can reach him."

The overpowering strength of opponents of the plan for a complete 1932 cotton planting holiday was demonstrated by the house vote of 92 to 38 which killed the measure.

Sponsors of a cotton curtailment program followed their victory over the Long forces by a second vote which placed the house on record as favoring the Olsen bill, embodying a plan for one-third acreage reduction. The vote on this motion was 95 to 34.

Passage Predicted.

Motions placing the Olsen bill on the special order of business tomorrow morning were carried by large majorities. Its passage in the house tomorrow appeared to be a foregone conclusion.

No vote on any cotton program has been taken in the senate.

A further shift of southern sentiment against the Long proposal also was noted today. South Carolina senators hostile to the no planting idea spoke in debate, asserting farmer massmeetings had approved the plan while "hysterical." A substitute bill proposing acreage reduction was introduced.

Long Quits the Fight.

EVANSTON WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE IN CLUBROOM

Miss Louise Rothwell, 40 years old, 1310 Hinman avenue, Evanston, committed suicide yesterday by taking poison in a room which she had engaged at the Illinois Women's Athletic club.

Police were told that Miss Rothwell, a member of the club, took the room Tuesday evening. A maid found her body yesterday afternoon, a half empty bottle of poison by her side.

A few days ago Miss Rothwell and Miss Olive Weber rented a house at the Evanston address from H. S. McCauley, and Miss Rothwell left there yesterday morning, supposedly to do some shopping in the loop.

Friends said that she had been extremely nervous of late, supposedly over financial troubles. A bank book, in which the record of deposits had dwindled from $16,000 to a few dollars, was found in her purse.

ThinksCollings Slain on Yacht; Body Is Found

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Facts casting doubt upon some portions of the story of Mrs. Lillian Chelius Collings of how her husband, Benjamin P. Collings, was slugged and thrown into Long Island sound from his yacht Penguin a week ago came to light tonight, following the recovery of Collings' body.

The body, hands and feet tied and skull fractured, came ashore early this morning on the beach of the estate of Marshall Field near Huntington, L. I.

Suggest Gangsters' Work.

The methodical brutality with which Collings was beaten to the point of death and then callously trussed up and pitched over the side suggested to some investigators the work of gang avengers, although a week of inquiry has failed to bring out any connection between the young yachtsman and the bands of outlaws, mostly rum runners who ply Long Island sound by night.

While the first stage of an autopsy on the body was developing new leads, the Suffolk county authorities received word that an elderly man and a youth corresponding to the pair which Mrs. Collings says boarded their cruiser and cast her husband overboard, had been seen in the vicinity. A general alarm for the pair was sent out tonight.

Seen at Norwalk.

They appeared last Thursday in a speed boat at Norwalk, Conn., across the sound from the place where the Penguin was found adrift a few hours earlier with the Collings' 5 year old daughter, Barbara, aboard alone.

One of the pair seen at Norwalk appeared to be about 18 years old, the other between 40 and 50, the ages given by Mrs. Collings in her description. The youth was a blond, but deeply tanned. The man wore a heavy beard. The young man was fairly well dressed.

The two men drove their boat to a floating gasoline station at Norwalk, took on fuel, then went into a factory near by and dried their clothes. When they had finished they asked the way to New York and departed.

Autopsy Is Revealing.

An autopsy on Collings' body this afternoon and evening disclosed that the young Yale graduate had been the victim of so vicious an assault that his skull was fractured twice, and that he may have been dead when tossed overboard.

The discovery, though it provided confirmation of the essential element in the extraordinary story of Mrs. Collings, introduced more mysteries than it cleared up. Had the wound on the head been only a gash, it would have corroborated fully Mrs. Collings' recital of how she heard the sound of a blow on the deck and of

Aerial Events of Day

Atlantic continues to hide fate of Portugal to New York plane and crew of three, last reported 410 miles off Halifax.

Bremerton, Wash., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The naval radio station received a message relayed from the Russian steamship Buriat saying Don Moyle and C. A. Allen, trans-Pacific flyers, reported today after they were missing for more than a week, were set ashore at the village of Mlano, on the island of Tilgino, in latitude 62 north and longitude 180 east.

The message, which was relayed from the St. Paul island station in the Bering sea, said the Buriat reported the flyers were forced down because of lack of gasoline and motor oil.

Sent by Russian Operator.

The St. Paul island operator told the naval station here the message was relayed to them from the Buriat by a "local Russian operator."

The message from the steamer did not say how far the position where the flyers were put ashore was from the uninhabited island on which they landed. It was not disclosed by what means Moyle and Allen would be able to reach the outside world.

A message sent today to Miss Frances Bresson, fiancée of Moyle, said they would be in Seattle by Sept. 22. Radio operators said they believed the message was garbled and the date should have been Oct. 22.

Latitude 62 north and longitude 180 east is in the Bering sea slightly southeast of the Gulf of Anadir and northwest of the Aleutian islands.

Thought Lost for a Week.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Nine days after they had been given up as lost in an attempt to make the first nonstop flight from Japan to America, Cecil A. Allen and Don Moyle, California aviators, were reported today by three soviet vessels to be safe in Olyuto gulf, on the north side of the Kamchatka peninsula.

The messages, according to information received here by the coast guard, said the flyers landed on an uninhabited island and were "safe and well" and would be home soon. The Kamchatka peninsula is in Siberia, and if they landed near Olyuto gulf, Allen and Moyle flew far north of their intended course over the Pacific to Seattle. The messages were intercepted by the navy radio station on St. Paul island in the Bering sea and by the coast guard cutter Itasca of the Bering sea patrol.

Three Soviet Vessels Nearby.

Navy and coast guard headquarters ordered an immediate effort to confirm the report of the flyers being safe. The messages received by the Itasca and relayed to the northern division headquarters of the coast guard in Seattle said the flyers were aboard the soviet steamship Piatty Krabolov. Another soviet vessel, the steamship Esquimos, at Penjensk bar, wirelessed that the Pialy Krabalobe was in Olyuto gulf off the Kamchatka peninsula.

"The flyers safe" message to the navy radio station on St. Paul island came from the soviet steamship Buriat, which aided in placing fuel depots for Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh in the Kamchatka region.

FIND CRAMER'S PLANE

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Wreckage of an airplane found in the North sea by the British trawler Lord Trent has been definitely identified as that of the monoplane in which Parker Cramer and Oliver

Pacquette were attempting a flight from Detroit to Copenhagen, it was announced here today.

Identification was made by K. D. Vosler, factory manager for the Edo Aircraft corporation of College Point, N. Y., manufacturers of the floats with which Cramer's machine was equipped. The identifying marks of the floats as contained in a radio message from the Lord Trent were: "Model 3830. Date 3-69-30. Manufacturing number 07006. Patent 1726429. Edo Aircraft corporation, College Point, N. Y."

Missing Since Aug. 6.

Mr. Vosler said the only figures which did not check completely were those of the manufacturing number which should have been Q7006 instead of 07006. He felt confident, however, he said, that the difference in these numbers was due to a mistake in the transmission of the wireless message.

Cramer and his radio operator were lost on Aug. 6 after leaving the Shetland islands for Copenhagen. A storm was raging over the North sea at the time and they apparently ran into it.

Cramer, former co-pilot of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S amphibion, the 'Untin' Bowler, wrecked in an arctic gale on an attempted flight from Chicago to Berlin, was trying to blaze an air mail route along the arctic circle, on the Detroit-to-Copenhagen flight. He was one of the best known aviators of the country.

The flyer had accompanied Sir Hubert Wilkins on one of his trips into the antarctic, and was navigator for Bert Hassell, when they were lost two weeks on the ice cap of Greenland on the first attempt to fly the same route on which Cramer perished.

NO TRACE OF ESA

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—When the fog, the treacherous air currents and the troubled waters of the North Atlantic pluck a victim out of the air, they do not give up the body.

Eight times since 1927 airplanes carrying from one to three daring passengers have soared over the ocean from Europe toward America, or from America to Europe, and vanished. No trace of any of the eighteen persons who met death in these flights has ever been found.

Today indications were that the ocean may have claimed another sacrifice of a plane and the lives of its three passengers, may have swallowed them up as completely as it engulfed the others. The trans-Atlantic plane Esa, bearing Wilhelm Rody, Christian Johanssen and Fernando da Costa Viega en route from Portugal to New York, was sighted Monday afternoon some 400 miles off Halifax. It has not been heard of since, and searchers have found not the faintest trace of its fate.

Only One Successful.

The Esa was attempting the extremely hazardous Europe to America passage—which has been negotiated only once with complete success. That was when the Frenchmen, Disudonne Ceste and Maurice Belonte came down at Valley Stream, L. I., on Sept. 2, 1930, thirty-seven hours and eighteen minutes after leaving Paris.

Two other flights—that of the German plane Bremen, in 1928, and of the English plane piloted by Air Commodore Charles Kingsford-Smith, in 1930, were partially successful, Kingsford-Smith was forced down at Harbor Grace, N. F., en route from Ireland to New York, and the Bremen landed on Greenley island in its effort to reach this city.

Several other attempted flights have come to grief before they approached the North American coast, in the vicinity of the Azores. Twice, flyers who managed to get toward mid-ocean have been forced down and rescued alive. But none of the dead has ever been found.

The presumable loss of the Esa brings to five the total of expeditions which have disappeared without trace in the east to west crossing of the Atlantic. The death of its three passengers, now regarded almost as a foregone conclusion by some air experts here, would bring the number of dead and vanished to twelve.

ATTORNEY FILES $100,000 SUIT FOR WIFE'S LOVE

Anthony J. Schmidt, an attorney with offices at 30 North La Salle street, yesterday filed in the Circuit court the praecipe of a $100,000 suit against Robert B. Beck, an insurance broker with offices at 111 West Monroe street.

According to Schmidt, who filed the suit in his own behalf, the suit is for alienation of the affections of his wife, Martha N. Schmidt, 1225 Chase avenue. On Tuesday Mrs. Schmidt filed a bill for divorce charging cruelty and obtained a court order prohibiting her husband from entering their apartment. In her bill she charged that he had removed the furniture from the rooms and had taken her Packard automobile.

From his home at 304 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, last evening Beck said: "The whole thing is ridiculous."

3 U. S. FLYERS DIE RUSHING HELP TO HURRICANE ZONE

Plane with Medical Aid Crashes in Panama.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Three more victims were charged up to the Honduran hurricane disaster today when a naval transport relief plane crashed near David, Panama, killing one officer and two enlisted men. Another enlisted man was severely burned.

The plane was loaded with bandages, gauze, pillow cases, towels and sheets. It took off this morning from Coco Solo, Panama, for Belize and was expected to arrive there at 6 o'clock tonight. Those burned to death were Lieut. [junior grade] Creighton K. Langford, pilot, Plattsburg, Mo.; Chief Aviation Pilot Isaac L. Jenkins, Couch, Mo.; Aviation Machinist's Mate Arthur O. Miller of La Salle, N. Y. Roy J. Miller, radio operator, was badly burned, but probably will recover. His home is at Erwin, S. D.

British Warship Lands Supplies.

The navy department was advised by Commander G. H. Bowdey, U. S. N., commander of the U. S. S. Sacramento, which has been at Belize since Sunday, that the British cruiser Danae arrived late yesterday afternoon from the Barbadoes with supplies. Commander Bowdey reported that the "situation ashore is improving" and that the Sacramento will leave Belize today under orders of Rear Admiral Arthur St. C. Smith, commander of the special service squadron, to which the Sacramento is attached.

The departure of the Sacramento marks the withdrawal of all naval ships and planes from Belize since the hurricane struck that city. The U. S. S. Swan, mine sweeper, which arrived in Belize on Sept. 12, sailed yesterday for Trujillo, Honduras.

The British government today formally thanked the United States for its relief work in British Honduras.

50 Dead in Mexican City.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—Fifty persons were killed in the hurricane which struck Santa Rosalia, Lower California, Saturday and Sunday, according to dispatches received here today. Most of the victims were drowned in the tidal wave which swept over the town.

Lack of drinking water, caused by the destruction of the town's water system, is adding to the suffering of hundreds of families. Food and medicine is repored to be needed quickly.

Property damage estimated at $100,000 was reported following a hurricane which blew into Vera Cruz at 4:30 a. m. today. Small ships in the harbor were wrecked and electric light service was stopped temporarily. No casualties were reported. The storm headed inland towards Jalapa.

Messages from Progresso, Yucatan, today reported a number of small craft damaged there by a hurricane.

PLANE AND DEATH RACE IN ALASKA; BOTH VICTORIOUS

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

ACHORAGE, Alaska, Sept. 16.—Death raced an airplane over the wilds of Alaska yesterday and won a partial victory, despite a thrilling flight in which a woman nurse and a pilot dared storms and fog over the desolate country to reach medical assistance.

When an emergency message was received from Takotna yesterday that two women must be brought out at once, Pilot Al Munsen was just sitting down to his lunch. He left immediately on the 600 mile round trip. He bucked storms and fog, but made the trip safely. The two women and a government nurse were lifted into the plane and the pilot raced back to Lake Spenard, where there is a hospital.

Today one white woman and a native baby were dead, while the Eskimo mother was believed on the road of recovery after giving birth to the baby at the end of the perilous air journey.

Century Air Lines Plans to Open New Routes Soon

Plans for two new air lines—between St. Louis and Detroit and Louisville and Chicago—are being perfected by Century Airlines Inc., which now operates between Chicgo and St. Louis and Chicago and Cleveland. The company is also investigating proposed new routes to Washington and New York, and to Atlanta, Ga. L. B. Manning, vice president of the system, last night said full engineering surveys are being made of the proposed routes.

FOUR KILLED BY PLUNGE OF MAIL PLANE INTO BAY

Radio Tells of Fog Before Crash.

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A pilot and three passengers were killed today when a Pacific Air Transport mail plane plunged into San Francisco bay shortly after it had taken off from the Oakland airport for Portland, Ore., and Seattle.

The pilot was Ray Boudreaux, Medford, Ore., former army flyer, and the passengers were: Kirk Herre, Seattle newspaper man; Col. W. H. Bissell, San Francisco, and F. I. Sheahan, San Francisco.

Flying About in Fog.

The crash occurred about 4 a. m. Boudreaux was flying about over Berkeley in a fog. He had informed the airport by radio telephone that he had only a 600 foot ceiling but that "all is O. K." Within five minutes a crash was heard and the plane had dived into the tide flats of the bay.

Reports of some eye witnesses said the plane had burst into flames before falling but this was denied in an official statement of the Pacific Air Transport which said the plane broke into flames after it struck the water.

Explosion Shatters Wreckage.

All were agreed there was an explosion that sent flaming gasoline and plane parts into the air and around on the surface of the bay. The tide was out and firemen and salvage crews were unable to reach the wrecked plane at once because the water was too shallow. About noon the bodies were recovered.

The plane had 400 pounds of mail aboard, much of it from Los Angeles. It was virtually all destroyed.

Federal and company officials began an investigation at once. Aviators believed the pilot became confused and mistook bay water for fog. He was formerly stationed at Crissy field, San Francisco, where he was known as a competent and careful flyer. The company only yesterday celebrated its fifth year of operation and until today had not had a serious accident.

MT. ETNA AWAKES; PEASANTS PRAY TO CURB VOLCANO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 16.—Mount Etna, famous Sicilian volcano, is threatening to go on another rampage of fire and lava, Prof. Ponte, director of the Etna observatory, announced today.

For three months Etna's activity has been developing and fire and lava are now pouring from the central crater. The great amount of sulphurous smoke is causing some alarm to the neighboring peasants, who are saying daily prayers in hope of averting a disaster. Two persons were killed today and two injured when the wall of a church fell. It was shattered by the rocking of the earth caused by the volcano's explosions.

Two years ago Etna was in eruption for two weeks and its lava buried four villages. Its present activity was accompanied today by light earthquake shocks in Tuscany and central Italy.

Blood Transfusion After Air Trip Fails to Save Son

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 16.—(AP)—James Short arrived by plane from Raleigh, N. C., in time to offer his blood for two transfusions, but too late to save the life of his 3 year old son, Richard, today.

CERMAK STARTS TO CLEAN HOUSE IN POLICE FORCE

Pledges War to Finish on Vice and Gambling.

Mayor Cermak promised last night to clean up vice and gambling in Chicago "even if it becomes necessary to suspend every commanding officer in the police department."

He made the statement when he was asked about the letter purporting to have been written or dictated by "Mike de Pike" Heitler, murdered vice operator. The alleged incidents of police graft and payment of protection money cited in the letter took place in the previous city administration, the mayor pointed out, and for that reason he said he did not wish to comment on them.

CAPT. JOHN STEGE.

Starts South Side Cleanup.

Earlier in the day he shook up the commanding officers of the three police districts embracing the south side colored territory, sending three captains with reputations as strict disciplinarians to those posts in an effort to break up policy gambling.

By that form of lottery, in which bets as low as a nickel or dime are accepted, the Negroes of the district are mulcted of thousands of dollars daily, the mayor charged.

Shakeups are impending in the Des Plaines street and Chicago avenue police districts, Mayor Cermak disclosed. The captains transferred out of the south side stations yesterday, he said, were sent to other posts because they failed to coöperate with Capt. Martin E. Mullen, recently assigned to combat vice and gambling under the mayor's personal supervision.

Stege at Wabash Avenue.

Capt. Frank Matchett, who was commanding at Stanton avenue, was sent to the Hudson avenue district to succeed Capt. Condon there; Capt. Willard Malone was transferred from Pekin Inn to Capt. Stege's old post at Cragin, and Capt. John Egan was moved from Wabash avenue to the office of the first deputy commissioner, where Capt. Larkin has been.

Lieuts. Andrew B. Barry and George W. Barker were assigned to the Wabash avenue station under Capt. Stege. The same order also transferred four other lieutenants—Eugene B. McCarthy to New City, John J. Hardy to Woodlawn, Charles A. Grattan to Woodlawn, and Richard T. Lawler to Chicago Lawn.

Mayor Cermak's Statement.

"Soon after I assumed office I had a survey made of the city," Mayor Cermak said in his statement. "That survey was checked, rechecked, and checked again. As a consequence I know what the situation is. It is not good.

"On the near south side, for instance, I found that policy games were operating unmolested and taking a huge toll from victims. As captains who were then commanding the districts had failed to take any action, I assigned new commanding officers.

"After two months there was only slight improvement, and today I assigned three other captains. I had them in my office and gave them personal instructions to clean up both vice and gambling in their new commands.

"Earlier I took similar steps at the Maxwell street and Sheffield avenue stations. My next move will involve the Des Plaines street and Chicago avenue districts, and others where conditions are not rectified.

"Today I turned over to the acting commissioner of police the addresses of more than 100 places where vice is flourishing. I instructed him to apportion them by police districts, turn them over to captains with instructions to close the places, and to warn them that unless they do so in the next week or ten days the patrolmen on the beats and the captains and other officers in charge of the districts will find themselves before the trial board.

"The police department seems slow in recognizing that I am sincere in my determination not to tolerate these conditions, but if drastic action is necessary to convince them that they must perform their duties it will be taken."

Stege Promises Action.

When he learned of his transfer to the Wabash station, Capt. Stege said: "Those policy operators are adding to the misery which the depression has caused in the colored districts. It doesn't make any difference whether a man spends his last dime for a loaf of bread or a policy ticket. Either way he is ripe material for a communist agitator.

"I haven't any prejudices against the colored people, and I don't think hardboiled tactics will be necessary or desirable with the bulk of the population down there. It's the policy games that are the root of a lot of the trouble, and if working sixteen or eighteen hours a day will run them out of my district, they'll go out."

Alcock Calls Elderly Men.

Capt. Larkin, the new commander at Pekin Inn, is among seven district leaders past the police retirement age of 65 who were notified yesterday to appear today for interviews with Acting Police Commissioner Alcock. All of the 134 members of the department who are over 65 have been ordered to his office for such interviews, or will be within the next few days.

The other captains on the list and their assignments are: Michael W. Delaney, Stock Yards; John E. Ptacek, Lawndale; Joseph M. Palczynski, Racine avenue; Martin J. O'Malley, Summerdale; Patrick J. Harding, Rogers Park, and Charles W. Johnson, first deputy commissioner's roll.

Six lieutenants, Charles K. Herts, James E. Day, Edward Murnane, Michael Golden, Edward Conway, and James Walsh, will also report today as will twenty-seven sergeants.

U. S. FILES BRIEFS TO COMBAT APPEALS OF GUZIK, OLIVER

Government briefs were filed yesterday in the appeals from the income tax evasion convictions of Jack Guzik, Al Capone's right hand man in booze, gambling, and vice traffic, and Gene G. Oliver, member of the county board of assessors.

GENE OLIVER.

Guzik was found guilty of tax evasion in Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward's court last November and was sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary and fined $17,500. Oliver was found guilty on the same charge three months earlier and was sentenced to serve 18 months in the penitentiary and fined $5,000 by Judge Woodward.

The briefs were filed by Assistant United States District Attorney Jacob I. Grossman.

In the case of Oliver, the government set forth that the evidence showed that he received "at least an aggregate of $458,008.51 during the years of 1927, 1928 and 1929," and that he did not even file returns for his total salary of $27,000 covering that period.

BROOKFIELD LAYS GREAT COP WAR IN JUDGES' LAPS

First Inning Today and Second on Saturday.

A showdown in the village of Brookfield, where two chiefs of police claim authority and a war of warrants for the arrest of their policemen has been raging, is expected this morning when Nicholas Ferdinand, newly appointed chief, and four of his men are arraigned before Police Magistrate John Dreher on charges of impersonating officers. Meanwhile the veteran chief, E. J. O'Connor, and his subordinates still hold the police station.

J. F. Mansfield, village president, continued yesterday to assert that he had the power to name a new chief and to replace four other members of the force with new policemen.

Trustee O'Brien's Side.

Village Trustee John T. O'Brien, who is supporting O'Connor, maintained that the right to hire and fire policemen is held only by the village board. Since the majority of the board is satisfied with O'Connor and his men, no changes will be made, O'Brien said.

The first warrants issued in the strife were obtained on Monday by Trustee O'Brien against Ferdinand and his men. They surrendered themselves and Magistrate Dreher set the hearing for today.

Mansfield retaliated on Tuesday by getting warrants against O'Connor and his men from Justice of the Peace George F. Lee of Maywood. Last night these warrants, also charging impersonation of police officers, all had been served on O'Connor and his policemen and their arraignment had been set for Saturday afternoon before Justice Lee.

Mansfield Charges Threats.

Yesterday Mansfield got another warrant. This one was issued by Justice of the Peace Edward J. Wareham of Broadview for the arrest of Rico Dincognito, a Brookfield resident. Mansfield alleged that Dincognito had made a threat against his life. The warrant charges disorderly conduct.

Mansfield also issued a statement in which he declared that reports to the effect that he was aligned with Capone were false.

"When I appointed my police," Mansfield said, "I instructed them not to commit any acts of violence or any acts that would cause trouble. When they went to the police department for the purpose of reporting for work, they were met by sawed-off shot guns and barricaded doors. Acting under my instructions, they left the village hall and patrolled the town and fulfilled their duties."

GIBRALTAR, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Sailors of the British Mediterranean fleet have protested reductions in pay under the government's new economy program, it was said tonight, and are quietly awaiting results.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—One of the strangest naval mutinies on record came to an end today when the British admiralty backed down before the sailors of the Atlantic fleet, who had refused to go to sea because they were dissatisfied with cuts in their pay, part of the national economy program to balance an $850,000,000 budget deficit.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN. (A. P. Photo.)

After a long conference at the admiralty today, the sixteen ships of the Atlantic fleet which were affected were ordered to their home ports, where the admiralty has promised to make an investigation of alleged hardships resulting from the proposed cuts and to rectify them if the complaints are well founded. The ships sailed from Invergordon, Scotland, just before midnight.

Give Three Cheers for King.

The mutiny, for it is that, although officially the word "unrest" is used, broke out when the ships were ordered to weigh anchor yesterday and go to sea for maneuvers. The seamen refused to obey orders and sat upon the anchor chains so the anchors could not be weighed. Just to show that there was no disloyalty, they gave three cheers for the king and their officers.

The only other act of disobedience was their refusal to go to bed at the regular time. Instead, the men stayed on deck singing and cheering. All lights from the ships was stopped. The ships, however, were so close to shore that everything could be seen and heard from there.

It is understood that the real cause of the trouble was a report that the separation allowance for wives of married sailors will be cut 50 per cent. As one seaman's wife now receives 12 shillings [$6.24] weekly. This was ordered cut to 12 shillings [$3.12], out of which she has to pay 10 shillings [$2.60] for a room in a naval port, which leaves only 3 shillings [72 cents] for food for herself and her children. The husband's pay, now 4 shillings [96 cents] a day, is cut to 3 shillings [72 cents].

Discrimination Is Charged.

The feature which has irritated the seamen the most is the alleged inequality of sacrifice for all classes. The sailor feels it is much more of a hardship to take a shilling [24 cents] a day from his three shillings [96 cents] than a pound or two [$4.86 or $9.72] from an admiral's 10 pounds [$48.60].

A denial that the sailors will suffer through their pay cuts in any greater proportion than other services was made by the admiralty tonight in an official communique.

The admiralty points out that the total emoluments of the sailors are made up of a number of different ingredients, of which the basic or subsistence pay is only one. The other ingredients, listed as "nonsubstantive," include efficiency pay, duty allowances, badge pay, standard ration and mess allowance, kit upkeep, and, if married and above the age of 25, a marriage allowance. The proposed cuts affect only the substantive pay, the admiralty emphasized, and in the case of the sailors actually range from only 7 to 13 per cent.

Admits Some May Be Hit Hard.

The admiralty, however, realizes that the men who have married before reaching the age entitling them to the marriage allowance will be seriously affected but the cuts, and it points out that further investigations are proceeding in this direction particularly.

The conference at the admiralty today was attended by Sir Austen Chamberlain, first lord; Admiral Sir Charles Madden, first sea lord, and Rear Admiral Colvin and Rear Admiral Tomkinson, in command of the fleets which mutinied.

Answering a question in the house of commons this afternoon, Sir Austen announced that the government had authorized the board of the admiralty to make proposals designed to alleviate any hardships due to the proposed cuts, when the facts were ascertained.

Laborites Yell Taunts.

Some disorder was created by the left wing Laborites, who wanted to debate the naval situation immediately. They were ruled out of order by the speaker.

When Sir Austen had finished his statement there were wild cheers and taunts from back Labor benches and shouts of, "You've surrendered once and you'll keep on surrendering." One Laborite raised the question of army pay, declaring that a major's pay is reduced only 4 per cent, while that of a private soldier is reduced 27 per cent.

News reached London today of disaffection among the British troops in Egypt over the economy cuts, which in this case has taken the form of reducing the mess allowance of 38 cents daily. Of this, 12 cents, which was allotted for salt and spices, is cut off, and the men have complained that they are not receiving sufficient food.

KUNZ WHITTLES GRANATA'S LEAD IN VOTE RECOUNT

BY PARKE BROWN.

Peter C. Granata, who was shown to have been elected to the national house of representatives from the Eighth district by the official figures last November, may not take his seat in Washington.

Granata's election has been contested by Stanley H. Kunz, Democratic former congressman whom he defeated according to the returns to the election board, and the beginning of the recount disclosed yesterday that Kunz is likely, according to his counsel, to come out on top at the finish.

"Granata was shown winner by less than 1,200 votes," said Attorney Urban Lavery, representing the contestant, "and as Kunz has gained nearly 200 votes in the first three precincts examined and as there are 100 precincts in the district, the official result apparently is certain to be overturned."

The recount is being conducted under special congressional authority by Attorney Edward H. Hoffman. It began with the reopening of the first precinct of the 25th ward. Here there was a gain of 70 votes for Kunz and a corresponding loss for Granata, a net loss of 140 for the latter.

Yesterday two precincts in the 20th ward where Granata served for years as a lieutenant for Morris Eller were being recounted. The 2d precinct of that ward showed a gain of 25 for Kunz. The rehandling of the ballots in the 1st precinct of the ward had not been completed, but it also was showing gains for Kunz.

"Kunz needs to gain only 12 votes to a precinct in order to win," said Attorney Lavery, "and we believe his gains will be much larger than that."

Since the election Kunz has charged that Al Capone threw all his forces into the effort to elect Granata. It was disclosed in the Jack Guzik income tax trial that J. Charles Granata, a brother of the congressional aspirant, had been auditor of Capone's Hawthorne dog track.

The Kunz-Granata recount is going along simultaneously with the recount of the ballots in the election of associate justices of the Municipal court. Charles F. McKinley, Republican and former judge, has cut down the lead of Judge George V. McIntyre, Democrat, from 2,368 to 599. A total of 1,495 precincts have been counted and 1,514 remain to be counted. Observers predict a victory for former Judge McKinley.

AMERICAN BAR PUTS SWANSON ON COMMITTEE

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—State's Attorney John A. Swanson of Chicago was appointed to a three year term on the committee of criminal law of the American Bar association at the meeting of the association here today. State's Attorney Eugene Stanley of the parish of Orleans, La., which embraces the city of New Orleans, was named for a two year term on the same committee. The National Association of State's Attorneys, organized a year ago by Mr. Swanson, who was elected the first president, is in session here at the same time as the bar association. The main purpose of the organization of prosecutors, Mr. Swanson explained, is to give them a voice in whatever reforms affecting them are proposed by the national bar association.

Warns Council of Defect in Drag Star Ordinance

Corporation Counsel Sexton informed the city council yesterday that portions of the city's ordinance prohibiting the use of stars on automobiles are invalid because of conflicts with the state statutes and advised that the ordinance be amended. While the city's ordinance prohibits the use of stars by any one, with the exception of police on duty, the state law grants the privilege of auto stars to members of the general assembly, elected state officials, and peace officers.

CAR STARTED BY MISHAP CLIMBS CURB, KILLS MAN

Accident Occurs as Girl Leaves Machine.

A parked automobile, accidentally put in motion, ran over a sidewalk in front of the Hamilton theater, 2148 East 71st street, early this morning, and killed Peter Petersen, 41 years old, of 7321 Chappel avenue, president of the Cit-Ro-Lac Products company and well known among dairy men. He was standing on the sidewalk waiting for a taxicab.

Woodlawn police questioned two girls and two boys and released them. They were Eleanor Talley, 15 years old, of 3300 Sheridan road, a student at the Chicago Preparatory college; Irving Herriott Jr., 19 years old, 10348 South Hoyne avenue, son of Attorney Irving Herriott; Marshall Shields, also 19, of 10903 South Hoyne avenue, and Florence Schwartz, 15 years old, of 7011 Chappel avenue.

How Accident Happened.

The four had been out in Herriott's car and early this morning Herriott parked his machine in front of the theater to let the girls alight to go to the Schwartz girl's home. The motor was left running. As the Talley girl started to alight she in some manner caused the car to start, it was said. The machine jumped forward and hit Petersen.

Mrs. Dumas McFall, 33 years old, of 6344 Cornell avenue, was killed and three men were injured in a collision early this morning between a truck and a passenger car at Stony Island avenue and 71st street. The injured, taken to the Jackson Park hospital, are Mr. McFall, who is an attorney; Herman Zirk of Eau Claire, Mich., and Gerald George of Hartford, Mich. McFall and Zirk were seriously hurt. The McFalls were driving north in Stony Island avenue, and Zirk and George were traveling west in 71st street with a load of peaches when the crash occurred. The truck caught on fire.

Miss Mildred Olson, 32 years old, 6928 Stewart avenue, was struck and killed last night by a truck at 69th street and Damen avenue. She was a teacher in the Luke O'Toole school. Chicago Lawn police arrested John Lord, 23 years old, 2535 Wilcox street, the driver of the truck.

The deaths of Petersen, Mrs. McFall, and Miss Olson, and two others increased the Cook county toll to 861 since Jan. 1. The other victims:

Mildred Szczepaniak, 5 years old, 1328 Chapin street. Died at St. Mary's hospital of injuries suffered when she was struck by an automobile at Division and Noble streets. Harry Korzeniewski, 4033 Nelson street the driver was held.

Charles Zellar, 34 year old, 5427 Harper avenue, Republican committeeman for the 5th ward, was seriously injured last night in a collision of three automobiles at 55th street and Drexel avenue. Zellar's car collided with the machine of Andrew Krerna, 4065 Ellis avenue. Both cars were struck by the automobile of Leo Pechy, 715 East 50th place. Neither Krerna nor Pechy was hurt. Zellar was taken to the Billings memorial hospital.

Mrs. Frank Wiffler, 244 East Pearson street, was killed last night in a head on collision between her automobile and another car south of Saline, Mich., and near Ann Arbor. She was driving alone.

GUARD CHILD HEIR TO THREE FORTUNES FROM KIDNAPERS

Auburn, Neb., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Mary Alice Lehr, 7 year old Alliance, Neb., girl, intended victim of a purported kidnaping plot revealed last night, is heir to three fortunes. The child is the only heir to the estate of her grandfather, Frank Gerlaw, local bank president and land owner, and also to estate of two reputedly rich aunts. Some one directed her grandfather by phone last night, authorities said, to place $5,000 in an alley in Auburn tonight. Guards were placed at the girl's home in Alliance and the grandfather said he would not go near the alley. Authorities said they had no clews.

DELAY GRANTED J. F. MALOY ON FRAUD CHARGES

Push Inquiry Into Six Movie Bombings.

Civil service charges against Joseph F. Maloy, former city examiner of motion picture operators and brother of Thomas E. Maloy, business manager of the operators' union, who is now under indictment with his brother and other officers of the union, were continued yesterday to Oct. 20 pending disposal of the criminal charges.

JOSEPH MALOY.

Joseph Maloy is charged with aiding 150 operators to obtain their licenses by fraud. Revocation proceedings against the operators, mentioned a week ago by William Jackson, commissioner of gas and electricity, so far have not been started. In the majority of the cases, according to Charles A. Bellows, assistant state's attorney investigating the motion picture controversy, substitutes were employed to take the examinations.

Push Probe of Bombings.

No headway was made yesterday in the triple investigation of the bombing of six theaters, all members of the Allied Independent Theaters' association. After questioning four suspects, arrested when 500 pounds of stolen dynamite was found in their stolen automobile, detectives at the racket bureau failed to obtain any information pertaining to the theater bombings. The prisoners were sent to the showup at the detective bureau last night.

A reward of $5,000 was offered yesterday by the operators' union for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the bombing of independent houses. Thomas E. Maloy, who announced the reward, stated that information would be given the state's attorney's office purporting to show that the bombing was done by the association of independent theaters to hold member theaters in line.

Maloy declared that negotiations were going forward with the owner of the New Regent theater, bombed early Tuesday morning, with the view of placing union operators back in the house to replace the nonunion imported operators.

Denies Any Negotiation.

Theodore Lavin, attorney representing the allied owners, stated that no negotiations had been under way between the Regent theater and the union and that no negotiations had been contemplated.

While the new "Scotland Yard" detail, stated at the time of formation to have the "brains" of the police force, yesterday devoted its entire time to the investigation but did not report any developments, the "Secret Six" crime force of the Association of Commerce was requested to aid in the investigation. Like the other investigators, they, too, last night had made no progress.

GETS WRIT AFTER WIFE AND RIDING MASTER VANISH

No trace was found yesterday of the red haired mother of three children and the riding master, himself the father of three, who disappeared from their homes over the week-end. Niles Center police were helping Constable Paul Even in a search for the two, who are Mrs. Lucy Horwitz, 28 years old, and J. W. McCabe, 34 years old, a former marine.

Jacob W. Horwitz, attorney, of 520 Stratford place, husband of the missing woman, signed a warrant against McCabe last Sunday. It was issued by Police Magistrate Percy E. Harms of Niles Center, where McCabe was employed as a riding master in a riding academy.

At the McCabe home at 4033 North Francisco avenue it was learned last night that Mrs. McCabe and her three children, the youngest of whom is 2 years old, had departed early in the morning. Neighbors said that the woman, who is an expectant mother, had been weeping since her husband's departure.

Full Text of Mike de Pike Heitler's 'Death Letter'

Mike de Pike's purported letter in which he detailed the ramifications of gangland booze, gambling, and other rackets gave investigators somewhat of a puzzle in determining its meaning. There were many incomplete words, the spelling of names varied as the message went along, and in some cases the wording was so vague as to cloud the meaning.

Heitler himself was an illiterate, and he dictated the letter to a woman, who, apparently not well educated herself, took his statement in long hand as rapidly as she could. This accounted for the variations in the spelling of names and the confused and frequently ungrammatical text.

Heitler's letter follows:

"Early month of gust—I got a call from Jack Zuta and he asked me to come down and see him. Me and James Belcastin [Belcastro] went to see him. And he talked to us and wanted to know who the party was that collected in the district and we told him a fellow by the name of Roksy, 104 South Halsted.

Tells of Visit to Nitti.

"He has a cigar store. He said, lets get together, me and Al [Capone] are friends now—and we can go out now and make lots of money. So Jimmy Balcastra answered him—I will see somebody connected with Al, then I will give you my ans—in a few days —so Jimmy Bruno went to see Franki Needy—[Frank Nitti] and Frankie Needy told Bruno, Rocksy, and Jimmy Balcastro to go along that everything was O. K.

"Then they came down to see me—Bruno and Jamie Belcastro came to see me the next day—and told me to go and see Jack and make some agreement, so we could make some money.

Arrange for Booze Traffic.

"So I went to see Jack with James Balcastro and he told us we should line the district with more whisky, alky, gambling so I told him we will not be able to do anything in the district till Comasoner—will be there. So Jack told me never mind—, Rocksy is collecting for the district at the present time, so I want you to go and bring Rocksy down here and I will have a talk with him.

"So I went and brought Rocksy down to the office. At that time the office was at 127 North Dearborn, so we sat down, the four of us, and had a talk what was to be done at the district. So the first thing Jack Zuta asked Rocksy was how much we collected from the district and Rocksy said 100 from each saloon for Commissioner—— and 100 for the Captain and the copper they have to pay themselves—so the next thing he asked Jack who sells alky in the district so Rocksy's reply was Frankie Pope [West Side Frankie Pope]. "Well get Frankie Pope in here—I want to see him." We got Frankie to see Jack and he order Frankie to go around with one of his men, Joe Aiilo [Aiello] and order them to by stuff

Ordered to Collect.

"So Frankie went around with one of Jack's men and Al's men and Rocksy and told them they have to buy from them eighteen cans—they were ordered—they got to take the stuff or close up. So they agreed to buy it. We went along and we had another meeting and Jack said for Rocksy to collect the money for protection and to collect the money for all the stuff for profit and turn it in to Mike.

"For weeks later Frankie Needy [Nitti] orders to Jack to take in Jimmie Adducci and Larennie ["Dago Lawrence" Mangano] and the combination and he said this comes from Al ["Scarface Al" Capone] so I went down to see Jack and Jack said I no the news—what the order was from the big fellow. We will go along that way till Al comes out. He said to me that Larencies [Mangano] got a game running the name Barboot and Jamie [Adducci] has got a policy wheel what amount to $3,000 a week —and throws that into the pot. So they agreed to do it, then they had a dance hall with Grossman partners at Madison and Union—and he sent me down with Jimmie Adducci to buy the other 50 per cent.

"I bought that dance hall and Grossman got $7 hundred so that made me and G. Jimmy D. have the dance hall. Then we had collected about 20 thousand profits in the district beside protection—one meeting we were all together—Jimmie D., Larence, James B., Rocksy, Jack Z., me, Mike and the reply from Jack—we have to split the money up. So Jack decided how to split the money up—that was a week before Al B. [Capone] came home—he said Al B. gets 25 per cent, Jack 25 per cent, Larence and Jimmy D. 15 per cent, me and James B., Bruno 25 per cent, and Rocksy 10 per cent.

"So the meeting was decided to wait till Al came home. During the time Jack said we can't do any big business till we get —— out of there —so he took $2,500 off the top and he call Jack Lindall [Alfred J. Lingle] and told him I have $2,500 if you remove —— for me. So Jack Lindall told him he will remove him in a couple of weeks—but that time—Al came home jail. So they had a meeting at the Lexington hotel at the meeting were Jack Z., Joe Aileo brother, James Balcastro, Bruno, Rocksy, Larence and Jimie Ducie, Jack Qusik [Jake Guzik].

"After the meeting the next day Jack [Zuta] called me up. So I went to see him myself. He told me that Al told him not to have anything to do with Lingel—Lingel is a doublecrosser—he has doublecross me about the Stadium—he tried to get the dog track going for the Stadium—so he is going to get the $2,500 back from Lingel and tell him never mind—and he said to Jack [Al did] that Ling is a doublecrosser and he is going to get his.

"So we went along—then about six weeks later we had a new captain in the station. So Jack decided with Rocksy if anything is to be done in the district to ask me Mike.

Sets Amounts of Collection.

"So Rocksy came to me the next day and told me Capt. —— is in the —— district house—and we got to collect 200 from each bootlegging joint and a 100 for each booking and cigar store that does booking. So I told Rocksy I can't decide on that. You come back this afternoon and I will have the boys in the office.

"So the same afternoon I called up Dago Larence, Jimy Belcastro, Jim Ducie and Rocksy came along and we had a meeting so they decided to give Capt. —— 15 hundred a month, C Tom 11 hundred a month and to go along for the time being. Then Al had another meeting in the Lexington hotel—Al told the boys to go along with Jack Z., he is going away to Florida and when he came back everything will be O. K.

Obeys Orders from Al.

"Four weeks later I got word from Jimie Ducie and Larence not to give Jack or his man any money if he sends for it. I done so. I didn't give any money to any one by the orders from Al. So I asked him how could I go along without giving Jack money if he called for it. He said that's what we got orders from Jack Q. [Guzik] and Frankie Real [Rio]. I did so I asked him what's the reason —they said it's a split in the combination.

"A week later Lingel got killed. Then came the transfer.

"So we got together after the transfer was made—Larence, Jimy Dce, Jimy Balcastro, Bruno, Rocksy, myself Mike. The orders were not to talk to Zuta and lay off all his men from work. I asked them where the order came from and Bruno and Larence said they were down to see Jack Qu [Guzik] and he said not to have anything to do with Zuta or Rocksy they are supposed to be out of the picture.

Captain Is Transferred.

"They said, 'Don't ask any questions, but go along'—and I didn't ask any questions. The transfer came—and they sent Capt. —— over to —— station.

"So we had a meeting and they decided to reorganize the district. I asked them how will they reorganize the district at the present time when the investigation is going on. —— is not going to hurt any one, but is just going to pinch for a while. Then Al [Capone] will come back. Then we will see what we have to do. A month later they took the split of the money and Jimmy Ducie took 2000 D out of the money and said this goes to —— every month — the committeeman. Then I gave it to him. Then he also said we owe 750 for a half a month to Capt. —— while —— was away for vacation. So I gave him $750.

Plan Killing of Zuta.

"Then we had a meeting three weeks ago. At the meeting was Frankie Pope, Jimy Ducie, Larence, Bruno, James Balcastro and they decided things should go along till Al comes back. So we stood still a week before Al came back, on a Monday afternoon, Larence said we had a meeting with Jimy D. and Larence said that Jimy Ducie [Aducci] he and Frankie Del [Rio] were going away to get Jack Zu [Zuta], and they may be gone for a week. We got to get him or we can't do any business in the district, in fact anywhere else—he will always be a bone in Al throught—day as he is alive.

"I told them not to do it. But they said it was orders from the big boss Al. About Wend. or Thursd. I picked up the paper and Zuta was dead—so I met Frankie Pope and Jimmy Balcastro and I told them that no matter and Frankie Pope said the same thing. Jimy Balcastro said you know —nobody else can handle this Captain —outside of Skidmore and Skidmore told Jack Gusiz and Frankie Real he will not do anything unless they get away with Jack—then he will handle the Captins in the district because Jack knows too much about his business. He wants to make money then we can make money so there was nothing left to do but get Jack Justa out of the way.

Meet to Talk Organization.

"The following Sunday Bruno told me Al came back—the Thursday night but that wasn't for publication—no one was to know it. So I said what do you think, they killed Zuta. So Bruno said to me—he was looking for him to be killed a long time ago—so the next Monday morning I had a call from Larence and he said call the boys in the office so I called that money—we had a meeting with Frankie Poe, Jimy Balcastro, Jimy Ducie, Larence.

"This was the ans. from Larence—I seen Al and Al said we should line the district up—to go to every saloon and tell them they have to by alky from this fellow and 200 a month. That will be for protection for Captain and Larence will take care of that to give up money and the Captain and Officers will have to taken care of themself.

"So I said to them:—I wouldn't be no party to do that. So Larence and Jimy Ducie decided Frankie Poe and Jimy Belcastro to go get the saloonkeepers in to Larence and they were order to tell that Larence is the Boss of the district and them people went over to see Larence—Halstade and Harrison, from the clothing store.

Demands "Protection Money."

"There was Jimy Ducie, Frankie Poe, Jimy Belcastro to receive these people and Larence was the spokesman and he told them boys if you want to go along with business I will give you till Sat. to bring in 200 dollars for protection money for the Lieutenants and Captains and the coppers. You will have to take care of yourself.

"They got orders to buy alky from the people they send to them and if you are caught taking from some one else you will be out of business. So I will give you time till Sat. to bring in the money.

"Now the following day I was called in and Frankie Poe that I had to give up all the money that I got belonging to the syndicate and the dance hall and Frankie Poe will have to take care of his own place and stay out of the picture. So I asked Jimie Duci, Jimie Balsastro, Larence, Bruno, Rocksy. I got some money coming. I want to take what I got coming from the dance hall.

Heitler Is Forced Out.

"Larence said to me—that Skidmore more would not do any business while you were in the picture—I had a talk with Jack [Guzik], Al Brown [Al Capone] and Skidmore and this is the words they told me to tell you. You can't even have a cigar in the district and if you insist on having anything you know what will become of you. They said Zuta didn't get so far and that's what is going to become of you. So I thought that the best thing was give them everything, office, dance hall and I am through and they shouldn't worry about me. So I told them to tell Jack Quisik, Skidmore, Al not to worry about me—that's the end.

"But I will say that if anything happens I will keep these people responsible: Billy Skidmore, Al Brown, Jack Quisik, Bruno, Rocksy, Jimie Belcastra, Dago Larence, Jimie Ducie."

HEITLER 'DEATH LETTER' PUZZLE TO PROSECUTOR

Fails as Instrument of Vengeance.

lic on the same day that an attorney for Leo Brothers, convicted of the murder of Alfred Lingle, is in Springfield filing a plea before the Supreme court asking for a reversal of the verdict.

Roche said he had also questioned the Capone men named by Heitler as involved in the Lingle murder, the Zuta murder, and finally suspected in Heitler's own death. These, as identified from the varied misspellings of names, were as follows:

Alphonse Capone, public enemy No. 1.

Jim Bruno, a collector.

Lawrence Mangano, owner of a Halsted street gambling house, public enemy, and generally recognized as one of the city's leading undesirables.

Frank Rio, bodyguard for Capone.

Dominick Aiello, brother of Joe.

—— Grossman, supposed to be a west side saloonkeeper.

The Heitler letter refers to Capone as Al Brown and includes him in the list of those "responsible" if Heitler is killed, together with Skidmore, Guzik, Fanelli, Bruno, Belcastro, Mangano, and Adduci. The letter says Mangano, Adduci, and Rio were responsible for the murder of Zuta. Danny Stanton is not mentioned in the letter. He is fighting extradition to Wisconsin for the Zuta murder, to which he was linked by ballistics evidence.

Names in Letter Misspelled.

Like most of those names, the name of Lingle in the letter was misspelled, called Lindall in one place and again Lingel.

The beginning of the document purporting to be Heitler's revelation of conditions in gangland begins by telling of a meeting. It then details a sequence of events emphasizing the murder of Lingle and showing that this murder occurred some time after the meeting. Lingle was shot down at Michigan boulevard and Randolph street on June 9, 1930.

No names of the police officials declared to have been named in the missive were given out by the investigators but from the chronology of the narrative it would appear that the transfers mentioned were those ordered after Lingle's death, when there was a reorganization of the police department.

Capone Talks About It.

Al Capone, gangland chief, who is due to face a federal judge and jury next month on charges of violating the income tax and prohibition laws, ridiculed the charges contained in the letter.

The story, published yesterday afternoon, that Capone got a copy of the letter from the state's attorney's office and then called in Heitler and threatened him with vengeance for having written it, is a repetition of a tale told weeks ago in an occasional publication issued by a professional reformer, it was pointed out at the prosecutor's office. Capone's interview is as follows:

Q.—Have you seen the papers containing the Heitler letter connecting you and others with the death of Mike Heitler? A.—I sure have. I never miss. Funny, isn't it, that some wise guy don't give me the bang for the Chicago fire.

Q.—Did you know Heitler? A.—He came up here once to see me and when I learned that he was waiting outside for me I refused to talk to him.

Q.—Why? A.—Well, you see, that fellow had a reputation of being a professional stool pigeon for many years. I never did business with a stool pigeon yet; that is, not when I know for certain that they are informers. I heard that Heitler was crazy and when a fellow gets in that condition he may write anything.

"As far as my having anything to do with Heitler's disappearance, it is joke," Capone concluded. "I know nothing whatever about the whole damn business."

Reported in Lawyer's Hands.

The Heitler letter supposedly was for a year in the possession of a lawyer, who lives and owns real estate on the near north side, and who from time to time has appeared to represent men of Heitler's ilk in their court difficulties. The letter is supposed to have been dictated by Heitler to one of his women friends when he began to fear that his many intrigues were going to result in his death.

Heitler started as a procurer of women, the police records show, some thirty years ago when the redlight district was an eyesore to the near west side. He owned a chain of bawdy houses. He was illiterate, but was known as a man who would stop at nothing, even to informing on his pals, if it would give his illegal business any advantage with the authorities.

As a result, it was pointed out by the authorities, he had been hanging on the fringes of gangland for some thirty years, but was hated and distrusted by all gangsters and hoodlums.

Skidmore Named In Letter.

Billy Skidmore, who is purported to have become one of the leading men behind the scenes in the west side racket situation but whose name seldom appears in the police records, is one of the men named in the letter as one who might be responsible for Heitler's death. Skidmore had been bitter against Heitler, it is reported, since Heitler testified against him in 1917 as a witness for the prosecution of the then chief of police, Charles C. Healy, and would have nothing to do with any of Heitler's schemes.

One peculiarity in the letter, pointed out by the investigators, is Heitler's statement that he had satisfied the demands of the gangland bosses—that he was not to be permitted even to own a cigar store in the district—and that he acceded to these demands, but still feared immediate death.

His letter says that he gave up everything after Skidmore stepped into the picture, but still he feared that the men named would kill him. Skidmore, the letter says, told Heitler's former allies he would have nothing to do with any project in which Heitler had an interest.

Among the men named in the letter as his possible killers, Mangano is the only one known by the authorities to have been with Heitler the night before his body was found in the ruins of the burned ice house. Investigator Roche at the time of the investigation held Mangano in jail for three days, but could obtain no tangible evidence against him. Mangano admitted that he was with Heitler playing cards the night before Heitler's death and that Heitler had driven all the card players home, Mangano last of all.

The letter asserts that a change was made after the supposed payment of the money to have the district captain removed. Capt. John B. Enright, now dead, was in command of the district until June 20, 1930. Capt. Martin Mullen, now in charge of the mayor's gambling and vice squad, was in command from June 20 to October, 1930.

The letter charges that Capone told the west side gangsters that Lingle was a double crosser and that "Jack" [apparently Zuta] was going to get back his $2,500 which he had given to have the police official transferred. Investigators here pointed out an error of fact in the letter, which says the captain was transferred in six weeks.

The statement said Lingle was considered a double crosser, because he had undertaken to have the dog track opened at the Stadium, which would be against the Capone interests in the outlying tracks. Capone denied statements to this effect, attributed to him, and Investigator Roche said that these rumors were circulated during the Lingle death investigation, and that no evidence could be found to substantiate any such charges.

Brothers Appeal Filed.

Springfield, Ill., Sept 16.—[Special.]—The state Supreme court, at its October term, will be asked to pass upon conviction of Leo Brothers, for the slaying of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago reporter. The appeal was filed late today on a writ of error to the Cook county Criminal court.

AIMEE'S FAITH UNSHAKEN AS OTHER WOMEN ACCUSE HUSBAND

HUTTON'S SONG WOOING AIMEE HAD ITS TRIALS

Three Other Girls Liked It, Too, They Say.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The Rev. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton has said that one of the contributing causes for her love for her new husband was the beautiful way he sang "My Faith in You," written by him and dedicated to her.

Daily returns from scattered precincts in Los Angeles and its far flung suburbs indicate David Hutton, the bridegroom, may have sung it well from long practice.

Myrtle Joan Helen St. Pierre, who sued yesterday for $200,000, alleging breach of promise, said he often sang "My Faith in You" to her. She is a dashing brunette.

Mrs. Roland Neece, radio singer and music shop proprietress, says he not only sang "My Faith in You" to her, but that she collaborated in its composition. She contemplated suit for $250,000 for breach of promise and an accounting of his earnings as her manager when she was a radio singer, but his lawyer is said to have dissuaded her. She is a brunette.

Miss Jeanne O'Kane says she learned "My Faith in You" by ear after Mr. Hutton sang and resang it to her. "He wrote me the most affectionate letters," she said. "He sent me his photograph with an endearing inscription and he dedicated a song to me." Miss O'Kane says she contemplates no recourse to justice. She's a blond.

Runs a Pajama Shop.

Mrs. Neece, a comely widow of 29, when not radio singing, runs a pajama specialty shop in Long Beach under the name of Betty O'Dielle. She began with what apparently was intended as some sort of a slam:

"Maybe I should make a pair of silken pure white pajamas," she said, "and send them to Aimee as a wedding present."

"I have instructed my attorney, Burr Brown, to draw up an action against Dave Hutton," she continued. "For one thing, I want an accounting for the earnings when he acted as my manager for song and radio engagements. For another thing, I will have Mr. Brown file a breach of promise action asking $250,000.

"Dave and I were close friends and graduated from Polytechnic High school in Long Beach together in 1922. For a while we drifted apart and I married Mr. Neece, who died four years ago.

Rekindled by Elopement.

"Three years ago Dave and I renewed our friendship and kept steady company until about three months ago. He became my manager in radio work and repeatedly asked me to marry him. We collaborated on several songs besides 'My Faith in You.' We had an understanding that we would marry, but three months ago he cooled, and two days ago I was dumfounded to read he had eloped with Mrs. McPherson.

"We were at work on a new song, 'Your Kind of Man' at the time Mrs. McPherson's mother, 'Ma' Kennedy had her troubles with her husband. 'What a Man' Hudson, and Dave and I joked about the advisability of changing the name of our song to 'What a Man.' Now it seems it might better dedicate the song to himself."

Has to Eat with One Hand.

Miss St. Pierre emerged from the seclusion in which she shrouded herself after filing yesterday's $200,000 breach of promise action, and said, "The first night Dave Hutton met me, at a dinner party in Long Beach, he squeezed and patted my hand so persistently I had to eat dinner with my left hand.

"Three weeks after we met he told me he couldn't live without my kisses. Although I don't believe in love at first sight, I consented to marry him. We set no date for the wedding. He told me he had interests in oil wells which ought to net several thousand dollars a week and was negotiating for a $1,000 a week radio recording job. Of the only two gifts he gave me, before he left in April saying he was going on a concert tour, were a pound box of candy and a necklace of crystals."

Mr. Hutton and Mrs. McPherson, who were at Ventura, Cal., conducting a revival meeting, and who were on their way northward by auto along the California coast this afternoon, joked about Hutton's parade of ex-fiancées.

Asks His Girls to Stand.

At the camp meeting at Ventura last night, Hutton said,

"I used to visit Ventura every now and then. If there are any girls here tonight who ever ate ice cream with me, or had lunch with me, will you please stand up and file your lawsuits?"

Five blushing girls took the cue and stood up, the congregation whistled, laughed and clapped its approval.

"My daughter-in-law, Lorna Dee Smith McPherson, is jealous of me," Mrs. McPherson told the congregation. "She says no one has yet sued her new husband, my son, Rolfe, for breach of promise, and she can't understand it."

Mr. Hutton issued a short statement saying that Miss St. Pierre had attended him in the capacity of a nurse while he was suffering a slight illness in Pasadena.

Going to Fight, He Says.

"My parents were present," he said. "I am going to fight that suit. It's an attempt to ruin my happiness and to embarrass my wife. And she can't collect anything from me, because I haven't got anything. I never asked her to marry me or any thing of the kind."

There are reports Mrs. McPherson will go into the movies. Sid Graunau and a lot of other movie men have watched the evangelist closely while she appeared in "The Iron Furnace." They did not pay much heed to Mr. Hutton, who also appeared.

BARGAIN DAY CROWD FIGHTS POLICE, HALTS CARS, BREAKS GLASS

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A bargain day crowd of 10,000 women today fought for nearly an hour with Brooklyn police amid the sounds of breaking glass and the screams of the injured, in an effort to gain entrance to a sale in a Fulton street department store.

Automobile traffic and service on four trolley lines was held up for forty-five minutes, while the police repulsed the crowd and shunted it into an orderly line on Livingston street.

Responding to advertisements of a $1 sale at May's Specialty shop, the crowd required two police emergency squads, two ambulances and forty policemen to check it, and then only after two plate glass windows had been smashed, 25 women injured, and one policeman had gone down with a possible fractured ankle.

FIRE DESTROYS HEADQUARTERS OF WASHINGTON

West Chester, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A smoldering mass of ruins, was all that remained today of the old colonial farm house used by George Washington and his staff as their headquarters during the battle of Brandywine in 1777.

The structure, known throughout the country as "Washington's headquarters," caught fire and burned to the ground at Chadds Ford, near here, early today.

The building was located in a section made famous by the struggles of Washington and his men during the revolution. Destroyed with the building were many valuable relics and papers dating back to the days of the battle of Brandywine.

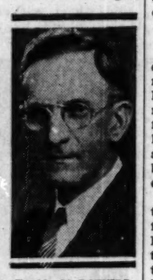
ROMANCE LOST, HE WHIPS GIRL AND KILLS SELF

Contractor Ends Life in Jealous Rage.

Edward M. McDowell, 53 years old, wealthy plumbing contractor of Elgin, shot and killed himself early yesterday after he had whipped a young woman whom he believed responsible for his unsuccessful courtship of Mrs. Belthia Sparks, 35 year old widow, head of an Elgin insurance company.



E. M. McDOWELL. [Duesinger Photo.]

On Tuesday afternoon McDowell invited Mrs. Sparks to attend a theater with him that evening. She refused and indicated to him that she could never accept the offers of marriage which he had been making to her for three years.

Breaks Into Widow's Home.

McDowell apparently believed that Mrs. Sparks' sister, Miss Bonnie Webster, 25 years old, had ruined his romance. At 1 a. m. yesterday he broke into the Sparks home in Elgin and appeared in the bedroom of Miss Webster, who lived with her sister. He carried a homemade whip made with an axe handle and thongs.

McDowell began lashing Miss Webster about the face and shoulders. He also choked and kicked her, she said. He was beating the young woman when Mrs. Sparks returned to the house from an engagement.

Upon seeing Mrs. Sparks, McDowell ran from the house by a rear door, the women said. An ambulance was called for Miss Webster, who was unconscious.

Body Is Found Nearby.

McDowell's body was found three doors from the Sparks home, in the rear of the home of Dr. P. F. Gillette. A pistol was clutched in his right hand and he had died instantly from a bullet in the right temple. He had apparently shot himself soon after the whipping incident and his body lay in the rain all night until discovered in the morning.

Miss Webster testified at an inquest that her relations had always been friendly with McDowell. Police believed that McDowell had been driven temporarily insane by jealousy and the conviction that Miss Webster had influenced her sister against him.

McDowell was a Spanish war veteran and past commander of an Elgin post. He was active in the Elgin Boy Scout council. He was divorced from his first wife.

ROB NEAR POLICE STATION.

Ignoring the nearness of the Deering street police station at 2913 South Loomis street, three robbers yesterday invaded the dry goods store at 2864 Archer avenue, menaced three men and escaped with $270 and a diamond ring.

ONE-MAN STREET CAR RULING MAY BE GIVEN TODAY

Lines' Plea Is Opposed by the Union.

A decision in the one man street car controversy by the Illinois commerce commission was withheld yesterday and may be announced today. The street car company asked permission to give one man service on 15 lines, and on 11 other lines at night only. The request is being opposed by the car men's union.

Attorney William Levine, representing the union, asked time in which to make an investigation of the company's claim that a falling off of revenue of $5,000,000 a year made economies necessary and that $600,000 was to be saved yearly by this means.

Attorney Francis X. Busch, representing the company, served notice that an alternative move would be in the reduction of the number of two man cars now in operation. Commissioner Paul Kuhn agreed with Busch in the statement that the company didn't need the consent of the commission to take cars off the street.

"If we must choose between two evils the reduction of two man cars is the lesser, in our view," Attorney Levin stated. "If the company is granted this permission to operate cars with one man instead of two it will never yield it and the one man car will become a permanent institution, even after the depression passes."

William Quinlan, president of the union, said the threat of a reduction in car service had been made to the union often during the last twenty-five years. He said the company will always maintain a sufficient number of cars in service to attract the riders.

Patronage Is Never Regained.

Attorney Busch replied that the alternative reduction was not a threat. Experience showed that when a line loses the patronage of the people it is never recovered, he said, and the company does not want to cut its service so that it would cause a loss of patronage.

The commissioners, Mr. Kuhn, Charles W. Hadley (chairman), Philip Collins, William Brinkman, and G. Gale Gilbert, asked many questions on the subject of how the change would affect the public and how it would be received by the public. Ald. William Rowan [10th] said the one man service was not satisfactory in his territory, in the southeast portion of the city.

REALTY LEADER CLASHES WITH REVENUE BOARD

Levy Battles for Plan to Fund 1930 Taxes.

The Chicago Real Estate board made a second presentation of its plan for tax relief to Cook county property holders yesterday before the governor's revenue commission. The arguments were long and the debate was sometimes acrimonious, but at the conclusion of the session it appeared that the commission still believes the answer to the current troubles cannot be found by funding the 1930 tax levy—the realty board's plan.

The plan calls for a bond issue of $250,000,000 to fund the 1930 taxes, which will be due about the first of next year. The bonds would mature over a period of approximately 20 years.

First Proposal Turned Down.

Once before the funding proposal was made. It was turned down because attorneys for the commission did not believe it constitutional and that opinion was made public. The announcement did not please the real estate board, and Mark Levy, its president, said so early in yesterday's session, which was held at the Union League club.

"Some of the distressed property owners are saying that the governor's commission is doing nothing," Levy said. "We believe that you [the commission] can wield influence with the governor and the legislature. Neither the property owners nor we will be satisfied with anything less than the lifting of the 1930 tax levy. We have heard of no plan, either better or worse, to take its place."

Calls Realty Levy Unjust.

There followed an exposition of the seriousness of the present situation, then Mr. Levy told the commission it "might as well recognize the unjust share levied upon real estate."

FRED W. SARGENT [member of the commission]—We do recognize that fact, Mr. Levy. We did before.

MR. LEVY—If this committee reasoned with the board of county commissioners, personal property could be assessed, and for an appropriation of $35,000 almost $45,000,000 in additional tax revenue would result, according to word given us by Charles E. Fox, director of appraisals for the board of assessors.

MR. SARGENT—This commission is charged by the governor to secure legislative relief. We are not an administrative body. If we are, I resign immediately. We are a committee to devise ways and means of legislation. The administration of the law is not a part of our duties.

Debate Commission Function.

MR. LEVY—My understanding of the charter is that it was threefold: one, immediate relief——

MR. SARGENT [interrupting]—All looking toward legislative action.

MR. LEVY—Two, permanent relief, and three, administration.

MR. SARGENT—This commission is not charged with assessing property, nor with managing the schools, nor operating the city of Chicago.

MR. LEVY—That is a matter of interpretation. This commission is charged with formulating a reasonable plan to take care of all interests or there will be no special session of the legislature. The people cannot pay their 1929-1930-1931 taxes. They surely can't pay $767,000,000 in eighteen months when Europe can't pay $400,000,000. We don't advise people not to pay taxes. What do banks do when people can't pay their loans? They extend the time or devise other means of payment. All we ask is for immediate relief.

No Statement Issued.

DOUGLAS SUTHERLAND [secretary of the commission]—Has this commission issued any statement?

MR. LEVY—No report has emanated from the commission.

MR. SUTHERLAND—No, no report.

MR. LEVY—The information was given out, however, against our funding plan. It was given out so the people would pay their taxes.

MR. SUTHERLAND—It was given out as the best legal advice that could be given.

MR. SARGENT—I only want to know if we understand each other. Our lawyers found your plan illegal. You were entitled to know so that your lawyers could get to work on some substitute plan. Nothing will be given out by the commission until our program is complete.

The Proposed New Taxes.

MR. LEVY—I had understood already that the commission was considering an income tax, a luxury tax, and a sales tax. It should be remembered that those who pay 85 per cent of the taxes represent less than one-fourth the wealth of the community. Heretofore the press has been excluded from the sessions and right now I want an expression from each member of the executive commission on our funding plan.

JOSEPH K. BRITTAIN [chairman]—This committee cannot be interrogated. You are here to present a plan.

MR. LEVY—That is your privilege, of course.

Kimbark Gives Warning.

Mr. Levy then introduced D. Avery Kimbark, first vice president of the real estate board, who began by speaking of the "bitterness" that has been created by the taxing situation.

"I won't hesitate to say," said Mr. Kimbark, "that out in my section of the city [the west side] 100,000 men could be gathered overnight because they are so embittered at the present situation. That is a note creeping into the picture that I don't like. There is a dangerous note you don't appreciate."

MR. BRITTAIN—You presume to say that the commission does not realize the seriousness?

MR. KIMBARK—The trend of the public mind is that the commission does not intend immediate relief.

Harry Goldstein, former president of the real estate board, was next introduced. He told the commission that bids were to have been opened on a new city sewer Tuesday and that not one bid was made because the contractors would have to take their payment in special assessment bonds and these cannot be sold.

He quoted Mayor Cermak as saying that public improvements were being stopped because "if the people can't pay their taxes, they can't pay their assessments." Mr. Goldstein next discussed a revolving fund for the city government and said he had been told by Victor S. Petterson, deputy city controller, that, if allowed, the city's total bonding power would be $525,000,000.

S. E. THOMASON [member of commission]—You talk of bonds. You know as well as we that if you sell bonds some one must buy them.

Bell Speaks for Funding.

A little later, Mr. Levy introduced Hayden Bell, attorney for the county board, who spoke in favor of the funding plan. He had not gone far when City Corporation Counsel Sexton, a member of the commission, challenged his interpretation of a state Supreme court decision he was quoting, and this led to a long and involved legal argument. Mr. Sexton concluded by saying that he had thought the real estate board had had another plan to be presented at the meeting instead of the old one.

After several others had spoken, Mr. Levy rose to answer Sexton's concluding remark, saying:

"The board doesn't feel it to be its duty to do the work of the governor's commission. I asked for a poll of the executive committee and invited you to reconsider our funding plan. It is the only plan we can see for relief."

Thomason and Levy Clash.

MR. THOMASON—I'm going to be equally outspoken. This committee is just as well advised of the hardships as he [Levy] is. I'll say this: we know our duty and you [looking at Levy] have a duty. You don't do a thing to discharge it. If you want to help, it's your duty to bring concrete, legal, and practical plans here. It's no use to stand here and talk of selling bonds. How are you going to sell them? We have a general, concrete plan and you add criticism.

MR. LEVY—I resent Mr. Thomason's statement that we present no concrete solution. We sent a 39 page letter——

MR. THOMASON—What do we have today that we didn't have two months ago?

MR. LEVY—You have added legal proof and the opinion of the attorney general that our plan is constitutional. We have a right to relief. After you had thrown our plan out the window we thought you had reconsidered.

MR. THOMASON—If you want to do a job instead of criticizing us, come here with a plan that will work.

Nixon Speaks for Peace.

GEORGE F. NIXON [member of the commission]—We are drifting just where I wished to avoid. No break will profit either of us. I expected to address an executive session. The point is that relief is more urgent now.

This was followed by a general restatement of the situation and the real estate board's plan by its chief counsel, William Wilhartz. He detailed it at length and emphasized that there is no quarrel between the board and the commission. Both want to help, he said.

Mr. Thomason called this address the "first reasonable proposition I've heard." He cited the major duties before the commission as [1] reestablishing the credit of the community; [2] providing adequate assessment rolls; [3] recommending emergency relief for the taxpayers.

Cermak Economy Plan Brings Big Decrease in Expert Fees

The effect of Mayor Cermak's economy program as applied to special legal and real estate experts was reflected yesterday in a report to the city council from City Controller Szymczak showing that the expenditure for experts during August was only $25,000.

Under the former city administration the monthly payments to experts at times totaled $140,000. During 1930 the voucher payments totaled $930,350 or an average of $77,530 a month. Friends and relatives of those connected with the former administration were enrolled at salaries ranging from $20 to $100 a day.

Attorney Heads August List.

Cassius M. Doty, special assistant corporation counsel employed by the council gas and oil committee in the telephone ordinance litigation was high on the August list with a payment of $3,225. Francis X. Busch, former corporation counsel, who worked with the committee, received $2,187.

Leonard J. Grossman, former alderman and assistant corporation counsel under the former régime, was paid, the list shows, $1,100 for services during 1930. Other lawyers on the list were Joseph J. Sullivan, who received $2,400, and Benjamin E. Cohen, $832.

Other Payments Listed.

Other large payments were as follows:

Name, service.	Amount.
Ernst Lieberman, engineer	$1,500

GOVERNOR'S BOARD WILL HEAR SCHOOL TRUSTEES TONIGHT

The board of education is scheduled to go before the governor's revenue commission tonight with plans for the relief of its financial difficulties. The board met in closed session yesterday afternoon and approved a program of three steps, which its members are expected to outline to the commission. Briefly these plans are:

1. An increase in the working cash fund from the present $25,000,000, which has been exhausted, to $100,000,000. Bonds issued under the increase would be subject to the laws governing the present fund: a maturity date of not more than 20 years, and the provision that not more than 50 per cent of the bonds could be sold in one year;

2. The issuance of notes in place of tax anticipation warrants, the notes to bear interest of probably 6 per cent and mature in six months;

3. The establishment of a tax rate based upon the per capita cost of the education of every school child, as is done in Missouri.

Demands Warships Be Given Free Passage.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—Great Britain today served notice that it will not permit the council of the league of nations to interfere with the free passage through the Suez canal of English warships, troop transports, and munition carriers in event of a threat of war.

VISCOUNT CECIL.

Viscount Cecil introduced an amendment to the convention to improve the means of preventing war, which is now being discussed, demanding that the Suez canal be exempted from Geneva's control.

The original text of the convention provides that the council might "prescribe the withdrawal of land or naval forces of a high contracting party from entering territory or territorial waters of another high contracting party or a zone demilitarized by an international agreement."

What Britain Wants.

Viscount Cecil's amendment states: "Measures shall not prejudice the right of a free passage through the Suez canal provided by the convention signed at Constantinople in October, 1888."

Mr. Lange of Norway pointed out that other canals and straits under similar circumstances are probably in need of being safeguarded, and he expected Great Britain's action will elicit a statement from Washington regarding protection by the United States of its right to maintain free passage through the Panama canal in case of a threat of war in that vicinity.

While America is not bound to respect the dictates of the council of the league under a treaty which she had not signed, it is realized that the moral effect of disregarding Geneva's request in case of threatened hostilities might be ambarrassing.

Slavery Under Debate.

During the debate on slavery today Count Pehna Garcia of Portugal stressed the impossibility of certain countries abolishing slavery because of the lack of capital to indemnify owners. He opposed the establishment of a permanent slave committee, declaring that the league needs to economize and reduce its budget.

Lord Lytton said that Great Britain had purged slavery from all its possessions, liberating 700,000 slaves at a cost of millions of pounds sterling, but he insisted that more than 5,000,000 were held in bondage in China, Abyssinia, Arabia, and Liberia under deplorable conditions.

Belief Grows That Stimson Inspired Italy's Navy Plea

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Added evidence that Secretary of State Stimson inspired the Italian suggestion for a naval construction holiday during the approaching Geneva arms conference period came today when it was learned that the Hoover administration has been looking into the question of a naval building moratorium for several weeks.

HENRY L. STIMSON. [Acme Photo.]

According to information current in administration circles today, Mr. Stimson had the subject of a construction holiday in his mind while he was touring Europe in an attempt to clear the way for a successful conference at Geneva next February. It was recalled in this connection that during his tour Mr. Stimson spent several hours in conference with Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister and the man who made the holiday suggestion before the league assembly last week.

Asks for Navy Figures.

It became known today that President Hoover called upon the navy department several days ago for figures showing how a holiday would affect the United States. State department officials also have been working on this problem in connection with naval experts. Thus far the question has not been put up to the navy general board, as it is understood that this matter will be decided by the President.

The administration's desire for a naval holiday of some kind during the Geneva negotiations was again made known today. It was pointed out in this connection that if a holiday is arranged the expiration date of the London naval treaty could be set forward by a year. It would even be possible, it was pointed out, to delay the 1935 five power conference for a year.

Would Help "Atmosphere."

An administration spokesman reiterated today that this government favors a holiday in the belief it would create a better atmosphere for the conference and improve the chances that political obstacles to a successful conference would be removed. The fact that such a holiday would defeat one of the widely advertised purposes of the London treaty—that of giving this country a chance to catch up with the other powers—will not be allowed to defeat the holiday plan, it was said.

Bids for the construction of eleven new destroyers were opened today. No contracts will be let until President Hoover decides how many of these ships are to be cut from the program for economy reasons.

BANK OF ENGLAND HEAD SAILS FOR HOME SECRETLY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, who has been recuperating in Nova Scotia for the last few weeks, sailed tonight from Quebec for Liverpool on the liner Duchess of Bedford, which is due at the English port on Sept. 23.

Mr. Norman, about whose movements there was much mystery, threw reporters completely off the trail following his arrival at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, from Digby, Nova Scotia, about ten days ago. His departure by motor from St. Andrews the following day escaped newspaper notice, and he arrived unheralded at the Chauteau Frontenac, Quebec, last Saturday, and remained there unidentified until his departure.

Tonight when he boarded the liner at Quebec he was accompanied by his Digby hostess, Mrs. Chalmers, who is a relative. His name does not appear on the liner's passenger list.

URGES INFLATED MONEY TO HELP TRADE AND FARM

Economist Asks Return to 1926 Price Levels.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Greenbackism and fiat money as a means of inflating prices to the 1926 level was a proposal advanced by Prof. John Commons, University of Wisconsin economist, at a conference held by organized agriculture yesterday to consider means of "stabilizing the dollar."

JOHN R. COMMONS.

It was one of a wide variety of ideas expounded, ranging from Prof. Irving Fisher's "India rubber yardstick" dollar which would stretch or contract from day to day as commodity prices fluctuate, to the proposition of government purchases of farm land mortgages now loading down banks with frozen assets.

The gathering, which was held under the auspices of the American Farm Bureau federation, was regarded by the politicians as perhaps marking the entrance of agriculture into politics on the currency question.

Draft Federation Program.

The meeting is to be resumed tomorrow with a view of drafting a program to be submitted to the federation at its annual meeting in Chicago in December. Later the expectation is that the program will be advanced before congress and also in the platform committees of the national political conventions in June.

The Commons proposal and its attendant discussion stirred reminiscences of the old days of greenbackism and of the Populists and the agitation for cheap money. Back in 1876 the Greenback party was for fiat money and ran Peter Cooper of New York for President. In 1892 the Populists ran James B. Weaver of Iowa for President on a cheap money platform, while in 1896 William Jennings Bryan ran on the free coinage of silver in the "divine ratio of 16 to 1."

Commons Stands by His Terms.

It was perhaps this background which led some of the conferees to suggest that Dr. Commons use other words than "fiat money" and "inflation" in expounding his scheme. But the Wisconsin economist declined to alter his terminology.

"I'd as soon call it fiat money and inflation and work it out in the open," he said.

The revival of bimetallism by the silver men was not reflected in the conference except through a remark from a Kansas farm leader, Andrew Shearer, who is 81 years old and went through all the storms over the currency and populism in Kansas. He declared for the gold standard.

"There's nothing wrong with the gold standard," he said. "The main thing is to increase the amount of money in circulation and take care of the unemployment situation in the cities, which are the markets for the farms."

Denies Third Party Talk

As to the political turn which the conferences have taken, a query among the politicians as to whether it presaged another third party was answered by Charles E. Hearst, chairman of the Iowa Farm Bureau federation.

"It means nothing of that sort," said Mr. Hearst. "We are simply trying to devise some program that will relieve the farmers and the unemployed in the cities and business in general. My theory is that any increase in price levels can be brought about only by an increased circulation of money.

"One suggestion under discussion is whether the government might not well take over the burden of the land mortgages which are keeping banks and business in the refrigerator with frozen assets."

Prof. Commons Tells Ideas.

Prof. Commons in elaborating his idea of a return to greenbackism, held that the government can now safely undertake inflation movements because it now knows how to bring about deflation.

"The federal reserve board," he said, "has ample power by open operations to issue and retire greenbacks, or fiat money. It would have power to restore 1926 levels, and then have the power to deflate.

"The main question now is how to get purchasing power back into the hands of the people. We have a greenback method. The only thing is the willingness of officials to issue them.

"This fiat money can be used in payment of federal salaries and for payment of every government debt we owe except interest on the public debt. It could be used as a dole for the unemployed. It would be used in taking up farm mortgages and in liquidating, the government to take over the mortgages.

"Increase Bank Lending Power."

"The federal reserve could require its banks to buy a billion dollars more securities. That would increase the lending power of the banks. It would be a great step towards inflation and the restoration of the 1926 price level. Then we could stabilize it.

"We couldn't advocate greenbackism and inflation unless we knew how to stop it. The banks would begin to sell securities, the federal reserve would have the power to deflate. Afterwards the greenbacks could be redeemed by offering treasury notes or bonds and the greenbacks could be retired at a time that would prevent prices from going above the 1926 level.

Predicts Swift Inflation.

"If you want to go after it hard enough—we've got to take care of the unemployed—you can have an inflation that will get back the 1926 price levels so fast it will scare every one. I think it is perfectly reasonable. What the farmers now need is to get labor in the cities employed and buying your stuff."

TUTTLE SEES HOW CONSTITUTION CAN COME BACK

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Legalization of the manufacture of beer as one of the sure ways out of the present industrial depression was advocated by Charles H. Tuttle, former United States attorney here and Republican nominee for governor at the last election, in a speech before the Kiwanis organization here today. Mr. Tuttle declared that such a step by those at the head of the nation's government would "warm into new life the old reverence and affection for the constitution."

He denounced the prohibition experiment and declared that "the whole constitution is today overshadowed by the eighteenth amendment."

"To legalize again the making of beer would create work for hundreds of thousands," the noted lawyer said, "form a new outlet for grains and thus tend to lessen the farm debacle, help in meeting the treasury deficit, lighten the burden on the taxpayer by providing a new source of revenue, strike a blow at the speakeasies, and tend to strengthen respect for law by opening a door for lawful exercise of personal liberty.

"It would revive temperance by restoring it as a virtue instead of destroying it as a crime. It would, in a multitude of hearts, warm into new life the old reverence and affection for the constitution of the United States as the greatest exposition of organized coöperative liberty yet devised by man."

HOOVER FIGHTS ANY EXTENSION IN MORATORIUM

Wants to Hold It as Lever for Disarming.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.] — Fresh complications, it was learned today, have been added to the position in which President Hoover finds himself as a result of venturing into European affairs with the debt moratorium and the Stimson expedition to compose other peoples' quarrels.

The President, it transpires, has on foot a project of large proportions for the formation of a pool by the great banking interests of the country for the purpose of giving aid to weak banks which might be forced to suspend because of their holdings of frozen securities. The pool would take over the frozen securities in exchange for cash or its equivalent and hold them until they could be liquidated at a figure approaching their face value. Such liquidation presumably would await the return of prosperity.

Excess Funds in Europe.

Mr. Hoover has discussed this project with not only his advisers on financial policies but leading bankers. It was one of the principal subjects discussed at a meeting between the President and the heads of several New York banks a fortnight ago at the White House.

The bankers, it appears, were politely attentive to the President's suggestion, but did not warm to it. They pointed out all kinds of difficulties. For one thing they doubted that they could find a sufficient amount of money for such a pool, what with the commitments of American banking interests in these parlous times, particularly to credit impaired Europe. If they could get their money out of Europe, the way would be clear to carry out Mr. Hoover's scheme, but who could tell when, if ever, they were going to get their money out of Europe?

Alternative Unacceptable.

Of course, if reparations and war debts were to be canceled or whittled down, the bankers suggested, or if the one year Hoover moratorium on the payments of these obligations were to be extended to three, four or five years, there would be a better prospect of American financial interests collecting what is due them abroad. They doubted that Germany would be in any appreciably better position to meet the obligations at the close of the Hoover moratorium July 1, 1932, and thought it would need an extension. If Mr. Hoover would undertake to bring about such an extension the bankers thought it might be possible to raise the money that his pool for ailing banks would require.

The President refused the suggested terms of agreement. He would not consent to propose at this time, at least, any extension of the moratorium for a number of reasons, the most important of which is that such a course would weaken his hand in the approaching disarmament conference.

Must Keep His Weapon.

Mr. Hoover is bent upon forcing Europe to agree to progressive disarmament. Reduction of the five billion dollars annually spent by the nations on armament would go far toward restoring prosperity, he holds. If he could bring it about it would be a big feather in his cap, his political lieutenants believe, in his campaign for his reelection.

The disarmament conference is scheduled to meet five months before the Hoover moratorium expires. Europe at that time may not be seriously disposed to disarm, but will be seriously interested in the attitude of Mr. Hoover toward an extension of the moratorium and toward the cancellation or reduction of the war debts owed the United States. And Europe, from what Mr. Hoover has said in Washington and what Secretary of State Henry L. Stimpson has said abroad, already is aware that the President's attitude in these matters will be enormously influenced by what the disarmament conference shall do or fail to do.

No disarmament, no debt reduction, is, in effect, the Hoover ultimatum. If he were to agree now to an extension of the moratorium the President would throw away the club he intends to swing over the disarmament conference.

Leaves Loophole for Revision.

When Mr. Hoover made his moratorium offer he said it did not predicate revision of the war debts. At the same time he said America would not exact payment beyond the capacity to pay. It is known that he visualizes the possible reopening of the debt settlements on a plea of incapacity to pay following a revision of reparations downward.

He has indicated that in such a contingency he would judge the sincerity of representations of incapacity to pay by the extent of armament reduction.

Debt cancellationists at home and abroad are convinced that when the President intervened in European affairs with his moratorium proposal he adopted a course leading inevitably to reduction if not cancellation of the debts and they do not conceal their satisfaction with the Hoover policy.

A REPUBLIC OF WORKERS! SPAIN ADOPTS NEW NAME

Socialists Are Victors in Cortes Vote.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Sept. 16.—Spain tonight became a republic of workers—in name at least.

By 170 to 150 votes the cortes touched up an already radical constitutional project over which it is now wrangling in the cool hours of the late afternoon with a Socialist amendment to that effect.

The constitution, more exacting than anything outside Russia, came to the cortes defined as follows: "Spain is a republic. All power emanates from the people." But five Socialists on the commission thought it should read, "Spain is a republic of workers."

What Is a Worker?

This minority viewpoint of the cortes was accepted amid a great uproar, after a sturdy defense of the idea and a large definition of the word "worker" by Luis Araquistain, recognized as the liveliest mind in Spain's triumphant Socialist party.

"A worker," said Araquistain, who as a writer on South American subjects invented "Yankee peril" for the Spanish public, "is any one who is essential, materially and spiritually, to society. The term has very ample significance. Excluded from its conception is a loafer in offices and a social parasite."

Then somebody proposed that Spain be named a "democratic and liberal republic of workers," and this passed, too.

Opposed by Conservatives.

Araquistain's amendment caused much heart burn among the members of President Zamoras' frankly conservative party, now called progressive and Lerroux's center party, known as the radicals. Speaking for the radicals, Guerra del Rio warned that the "republic of workers" would create the worst kind of an impression abroad.

"It is the soviet constitution almost word for word. It was agreed this would be a republic for all without class spirit."

The radicals got so excited over the victory of the Socialists that with whoops and yells they withdrew to consult and with whoops and yells came back to announce in a nasty manner that if they had to have a republic they wanted it defined as federal.

This started things all over again, as the Socialists, and for that matter, the radicals, too, will not hear of dividing the country into artificial units, because the Basques and Catalans would probably get autonomy. When the motion seemed on the point of being passed with the Catalans' support, the government stepped in and got it deferred until tomorrow.

FORCED TO QUIT HOME WHEN JOB FAILS; SUES WIFE

From northern Italy Frank Canino and his plump wife, Philomena, journeyed to America twenty-six years ago. Frank went to work with pick and shovel. Philomena busied herself raising a family of six children. The family fortune increased every Saturday when Frank deposited his savings in the hand of his wife, and eventually they purchased a home at 2011 Maypole avenue, now worth $10,000. Still later they bought a three story flat building at 3550 West Harrison street, now valued at $20,000. Title to both buildings was in Philomena's name.

Early this year Frank, at the age of 62, lost his job with the city street department. Then he charges Philomena turned him from home. He found shelter in a tenement basement with other casuals.

Yesterday Attorney Irving Brackstone filed a bill for divorce in the Circuit court, making the above charges on behalf of Frank, who also says his wife is living on the income of the buildings he bought. He asks alimony.

SUES WIDOW OF LUMBERMAN AND HER CHILDREN

Mrs. Elizabeth Beidler, widow of Francis Beidler, wealthy lumberman, her son, Francis Jr., and her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Carton of Paris, were sued for $25,000 yesterday by Attorney Frank Crawford of Nice, France. The praecipe of the suit was filed in the Circuit court here.

Attorney Edwin W. Sims, who filed the suit in behalf of Attorney Crawford, who is a graduate of the University of Michigan and captain of one of the football teams there in the '90's, said that action was filed in an effort to collect fees for legal services given last year.

Mrs. Beidler and her son live at 20 South Stonegate road in Lake Forest. They could not be reached last evening.

Job Insurance and Old Age Pensions.

with 50 or more employés shall be required to form a trade association under supervision of some federal body.

All companies with 25 or more stockholders shall send out quarterly statements of the condition of the business and its earnings.

A national workmen's compensation act shall be modeled after the best features in various present state acts.

A life and disability policy, equal in face value to one year's salary, shall be taken out for every employé, the employer and employé each to pay half the premiums. The portion paid for by the employé remains his if he leaves that field of industry.

Each Side Contributes.

Employé and employer shall each pay annually one per cent of the employé's yearly salary into a pension fund which shall be paid back after retirement at the age of 70 in annual sums of approximately half the employé's annual salary.

Employé and employer shall each pay one per cent of the employé's salary for unemployment insurance for every one earning a normal yearly wage or salary of $5,000 or less. Loans without interest charge may be made from this fund to employés. Two weeks after the employé loses his job he can begin to draw the insurance at the rate of 50 per cent per week of his normal wage or salary. These payments shall be made for no more than 10 weeks in any consecutive 12 months.

A Quid Pro Quo.

Companies engaging in export business may deduct from their federal income taxes the equivalent of a certain percentage [to be fixed by law] of their export sales, this percentage to be deemed equivalent to the money spent on various employé benefits.

"By this method," Mr. Swope said in referring to the last provision, "American industry can discharge its obligations to its employés and, by holding its position in the markets of the world, bring additional work to America.

"The foregoing plan tends to put all domestic corporations on a parity, thereby removing the inequality of laws in different states . . . places on organized industry the obligation of coördinating production and consumption . . . tends to assure more uniform and continuous employment for the worker and to remove fear from his mind, allowing him to devote himself wholeheartedly to his task.

"Cost of the product will include these items and will therefore be paid by the users and not in general by members of the community reached by the vicarious method of the imposition of a tax. Then organized industry will be in the position that it should rightly assume of serving the public with public confidence and with the joint participation of workmen and management in the solution of these vital problems."

PROMISED TO LEAVE CHARITY 10 MILLION, BUT STOCKS SHRUNK

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The will of C. Harold Smith, who once asked for advice on how to give away $10,000,000 for philanthropic purposes, was filed for probate in the surrogate's court here this afternoon.

Mr. Smith died on Aug. 31 last in a London hotel.

His attorney, Reid L. Carr of the law firm of Clark, Carr and Ellis, issued a statement in which he said that Mr. Smith's estate, which was mostly in common stocks, had dwindled to $4,000,000. Mr. Carr said in part:

"His desire to donate $10,000,000 for philanthropic purposes was founded two years ago when security values were at peak prices. Then came the downfall in stock values, in course of which his properties, being largely invested in common stock, shrank to less than one-fourth of its former amount.

"In the troubled period many calls were made upon his generosity, to which he liberally responded. Changed financial conditions rendered it obviously impossible for him to proceed with his ambitious project."

Weiss Quizzed Again on Deals with Bank Thief

David D. Weiss, merchant tailor and member of the Board of Trade, was recalled yesterday before an investigating committee of the board for further questioning concerning his transactions with Walter E. Wolf, embezzling clerk of the Continental-Illinois Bank and Trust company. In accordance with the board's rule prohibiting nonmembers from participating in such procedures, Weiss procured as his counsel Attorney James J. Coughlin, a member of the board. The lawyer was not permitted in the committee's chamber, however.

JOB INSURANCE VOTED DOWN AT LABOR MEETING

Illinois Federation Has Day-Long Battle.

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—After an argument lasting nearly the entire day, the Illinois Federation of Labor convention here late this afternoon refused to adopt a resolution indorsing unemployment insurance and asking a billion dollar fund for its administration.

The resolution, introduced by William Reznicek of Chicago, was the first to be reported by the committee. The report asked that the resolution be held in abeyance until after the American Federation of Labor convention in Vancouver.

Immediately after the report delegates were on their feet asking that the committee be overruled and unemployment insurance with its billion dollar fund be made a demand of the Illinois federation.

Pleads with Delegates.

Officers of the federation, including Secretary Victor Olander, pleaded with the delegates to accept the decision of their executive committee on the question. They told the delegates the leaders had given the matter long and careful consideration, and action here now would jeopardize the interests of working people. "Some of you talking on this subject are babes in the woods and more remarkable for what you don't know than what you do," Olander declared.

A motion to close debate passed, 123 to 87, and the committee report was then adopted.

Chase Addresses Convention.

Dr. Henry W. Chase, president of the University of Illinois; Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Chicago Municipal court, and Mrs. Florence Curtis Hanson of Chicago, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of School Teachers, were speakers today.

In introducing President Chase, R. G. Soderstrom, president of the federation, said he is a friend of organized school teachers as well as organized labor. His appearance marked the first time that a University of Illinois head has ever appeared at a state labor convention.

Dr. Chase called the university "the great gateway of opportunity at Urbana" and said that last year 2,500 students on the campus were sons and daughters of laboring men.

"The only enduring path to progress lies in training our young men and women to understand the modern world better than we do," Dr. Chase declared. "There was a time when an education was for a few who were to be leaders, now it is an agency for raising the level of understanding of the nation as a whole."

Income Tax Collections in This Area Drop 21 Million

Income tax collections for the third quarter of this year, practically complete, amounted to $23,068,766 as against $44,613,82[illegible]16 for the corresponding period last year, according to figures made publi[illegible] yesterday by Robert E. Neely, acting collector of internal revenue for this area. Altogether, $93,614,841 has been collected this year as against $157,724,667 for the corresponding period last year.

CHARGE MEYER DIVERTED FUNDS OF AUTO GROUPS

Hugo Meyer, manager of the Motorists' Association of Illinois, founder of the Motorists' Corporation and the Motorists' Athletic club, was charged with having diverted $300,000 of the funds of the three organizations to his own use in a bill for an accounting filed in the Circuit court yesterday. A court order removing him from office and an injunction restraining him from disposing of any of his property also were asked.

Meyer who has been involved in varying types of court litigation for nearly a decade, is at present contesting the divorce filed by his third wife, Mrs. Dewey Evelyn Meyer. Yesterday's bill was filed by Attorney Benjamin H. Black and Bernard J. Brown on behalf of six stockholders in the motorists' organizations.

They charge that he used the name of Attorney Harry K. Curtis, son of Vice President Curtis, to attract members to the organizations although Attorney Curtis was "merely a dummy member" of the board of directors.

Similarly, it is charged, Meyer used the name of Attorney Henry A. Blair, whom the public assumed was the traction magnate.

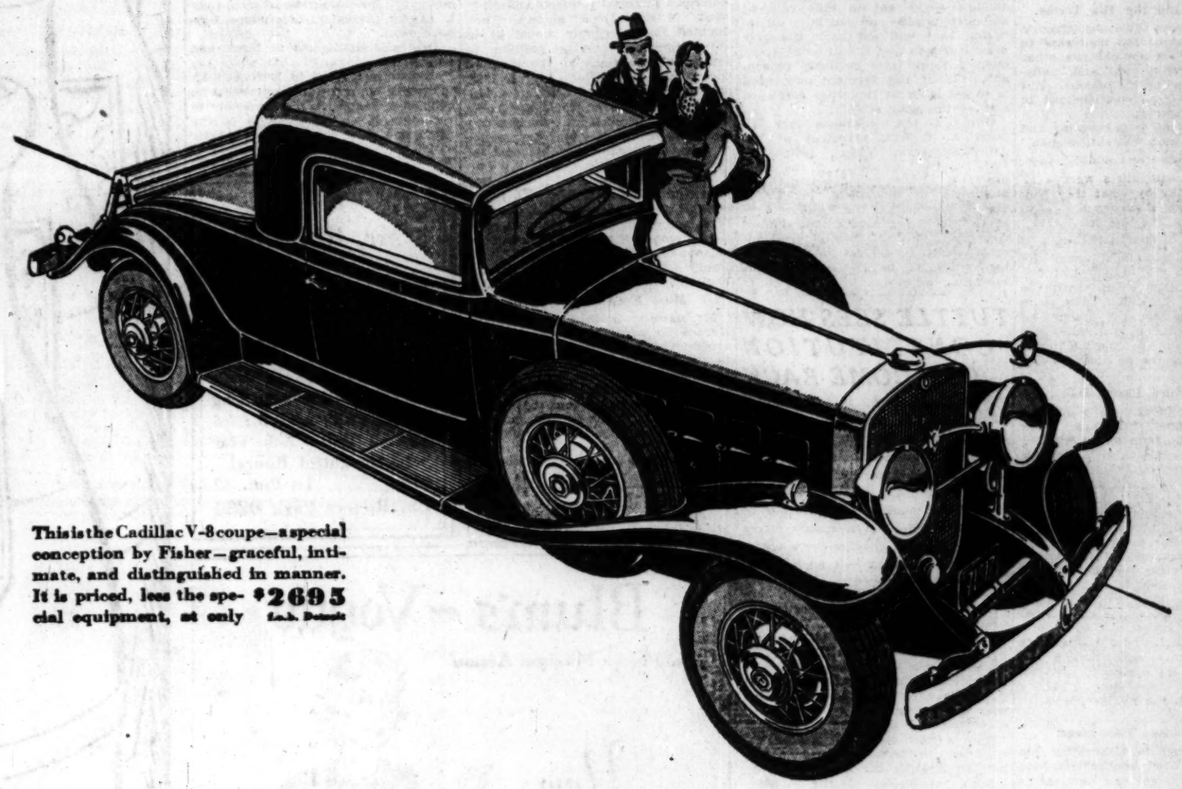
Cadillac V-8



This is the Cadillac V-8 coupe—a special conception by Fisher—graceful, intimate, and distinguished in manner. It is priced, less the special equipment, at only $2695 f.o.b. Detroit

The finest V-8 Cadillac ever built

. . yet only $2695, f.o.b. Detroit

For many years, the Cadillac V-8 has been one of the most eagerly sought-after commodities in the world—for with it has gone a measure of prestige and distinction provided by few other possessions a man could acquire.

So obvious has been this fact, and so universally acknowledged, that men and women have seldom considered price when the time has come in their lives for Cadillac ownership.

And even in this day of value-seeking, such continues to be the case. The family that is ready for a Cadillac, buys it without much thought of the cost.

Certainly, however, it should be a matter for additional satisfaction that this distinguished car is now so modestly priced.

Since the inauguration of Cadillac's broadened manufacturing program, Cadillac V-8 prices have been lowered hundreds of dollars on each model. Actually, V-8 ownership is now almost as inexpensive, from every standpoint, as that of a medium-priced automobile.

Yet, the car that carries the V-8 emblem today is the finest V-8 that Cadillac has ever built — finest in engineering, finest in materials and finest in workmanship.

Won't you come in and drive a Cadillac V-8—today? Prices now range upward from only $2695, f. o. b. Detroit.

Interrupts Meeting for Evening Devotions.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Having bearded the British lion in his den by his caustic speech at yesterday's round table conference, Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, carried his fight for Indian independence to parliament tonight.

By special invitation, he addressed the parliamentary members of the Labor party in one of the house committee rooms. He has been invited to address a meeting of all parties in the house tomorrow.

Members Question Him.

It is the British parliament which must approve the new Indian constitution, if it is obtained peacefully, and the mahatma spoke frankly about his demands for independence.

It was largely a repetition of yesterday's address. Gandhi explained why he came here to demand independence, and how it might be profitable for Britain, in view of her financial plight, to accept India as a partner, rather than as a subject. He was closely questioned by various members of parliament.

Interrupts Meeting to Pray.

An unusual scene was witnessed in the committee room when Gandhi suddenly interrupted the proceedings to say his prayers on the floor.

According to his religion, the mahatma offers prayers every morning at 4:30 o'clock and every evening at 7 o'clock. Promptly at 7 tonight, in the middle of the meeting, he waved his hand and begged permission to be excused for a few minutes. Accompanied by Miss Madeleine Slade and Mrs. Sarojni Naidu, he squatted on the bare floor, unbuckled his sandals, and proceeded with his devotions.

The Labor members stood in silence as the cadences of his prayer to Vishnu echoed through the corridors of the staid house of commons.

May Speak Again Today.

Meanwhile, the federal structures committee jogged along today with dull details about the method of selecting representatives of each chamber of the proposed Indian federal legislature. Gandhi sat tight but took copious notes and indicated that he might say a few words tomorrow.

The Indian princes went into a huddle tonight to consider the best way to defend themselves against repeated attacks by the other delegates, who have asked them to give up their medieval system of autocracy and give their enslaved subjects a chance. They will speak up tomorrow.

Press Ignores Gandhi's Speech.

Indian nationalists were a bit perturbed today by what they believe is a conspiracy of silence directed against Gandhi by the London press. The Rothermere papers practically ignored his speech yesterday, and the Times buried it on an obscure page, although devoting two columns to it.

The Daily Herald, a Labor paper, and the Manchester Guardian hailed it as "remarkable, shrewd, and subtle." Both of them thought, however, it left the way open to settlement. The Guardian chided Gandhi for dwelling so much on Britain's budget difficulties. The Labor organ concluded that, though Gandhi's claims are strong, settlement is possible with "good will, common sense, and intelligence."

Gandhi's Son Sees Night Life.

While Gandhi spun his son stole away tonight to take a look at London night life. Not that he went to any night clubs. Devidas is 19 and curious and just wanted to see the city streets of the big town at night. With him went Govind Malliviya, 21 year old son of the venerable Pandit Malliviya. The pandit brought scores of jugs of holy water from the Ganges to London with him.

It was shortly before midnight when the pair made their way up Charing Cross road. Dozens of theaters were just emptying thousands into the street. Tall men in opera hats and long tailed coats and women in evening gowns, low necked and low backed, brushed past the awed youngsters.

Young Gandhi and Malliviya were terribly impressed. They gaped at the hurrying crowd, the roaring buses, the taxis, the cars and the flashing signboards of Piccadilly.

"So this is London," said Gandhi excitedly. "What a town."

"It's great, but so fast," said Malliviya, who lives in the holy city of Benares on the Ganges. "Yes, I'm afraid it's too fast for us. These jumping lights, these racing buses and cars, these mad, silk hatted people trying to catch them, and this deafening noise—no, give me my Ganges. Our ways are slower, but I prefer them."

Young Gandhi agreed.

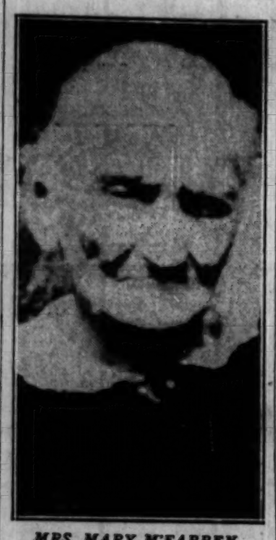
100 Years Old



MRS. MARY M'FARREN.

Oregon, Ill., Sept. 17.—[Special.]—Mrs. Mary McFarren will celebrate the 100th anniversary of her birth at her home in this city today. She is Ogle county's oldest citizen.

At the turn of the century mark, Mrs. McFarren's eyesight is good, her mental faculties are clear, and her hearing is only slightly impaired. She is subject to occasion heart attacks, but insists on being up and about her home and doing her share of the housework.

Mrs. McFarren was the fourth child of a family of five born to Martha and Jacob Sells in Franklin county, Pennsylvania. She was married to Jacob McFarren in 1863. Four of her five children are still living. They are Jerome and Solomon McFarren, and Mrs. Mary Higgs, living in Topeka, Kas., and Mrs. Emma Scott of Kansas City, Kas. Mrs. McFarren has twenty-one grandchildren, four great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Mrs. McFarren came to Oregon to live in 1918. Her husband died in 1915 in Arkansas. She made her home in Topeka from 1885 to 1905. Her son, S. J. McFarren, with whom she lived in Oregon, died several years ago.

INQUEST TODAY INTO SUPPOSED VICTIM OF RIDE

An inquest will be held this morning in the county morgue into the death of Carlos Piazzo, 29 years old, 5646 South Kedzie avenue, whose body was found early yesterday slumped over the wheel of his automobile parked in a lonely road near Cicero avenue and 79th street. He had been shot twice through the back of the head, apparently from the tonneau of the car.

Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, and Lieut. Edward Weber of the county police said Piazzo was a minor hoodlum, probably engaged in the alcohol racket. His wife, Elizabeth, said that as far as she knew he had been employed as an automobile mechanic near 17th and Morgan streets.

Piazzo had not been seen by his relatives since he left his home Tuesday night after taking his mother-in-law, Mrs. Amedio Russo, 1114 South Morgan street, to his home. He was the father of an 8 months old boy, Carlos Jr.

TURKS PROTEST MOVE TO SET UP CALIPH IN INDIA

Demand Britain Keep Her Hands Off Religion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Strong objections to an agreement just reached between Indian Moslems and the former caliph, the religious head of all Islam, whereby he would move to India and reestablish himself as pontiff, after renouncing his claims to the crown of Turkey, were made in a note which was given to the British ambassador at Ankara today by the Turkish government.

Indian Moslems have concluded an agreement with the idea of strengthening their party in India, as well as providing a rallying point for the Moslem world, and Moslem leaders are now in London, it is understood, intending to discuss the plan with the British. The Turks have raised such strong objections, however, that their friendship with England is threatened, and large groups have already signified the position if Great Britain became mixed up with the caliphate question it would be regarded as a hostile act.

Call Move Dangerous.

The Indian Moslems apparently thought the agreement by the former caliph, who is now on the Riviera, to renounce his claims to the crown of Turkey, would pacify the Turks, but the latter were not impressed, according to the note sent to the British ambassador.

The Turks insist that if the caliphate is restored it must be restored by those powerful enough to abolish it, namely themselves, and they declare that the establishment of a caliph in territory flying infidel flags would be a dangerous novelty.

Moreover, according to tradition, the office of the Mohammedan pontiff was vested first in Turkish families, the Turks declared, and President Mustapha Kemal Pasha himself would be entitled to the office, because he holds the relics of the prophet and the Islams have always insisted that whoever holds these can be the caliph. A section of Turkish opinion wanted Kemal to take the caliphate in 1923 and they are now speaking ag[illegible].

Turkey Has Trump Cards.

If, however, the Indian Moslems stole a march, Turkey has trump cards in the shape of three Osman princes whom she is secretly subsidizing, and she would call on one of them to assume the caliphate and guardianship of the holy relics. This would checkmate the former caliph and the Turks would have their own caliph established at Adrianople and surrounded by troops. He would receive "constitutional" advice on public statements.

Apart from other considerations, the Turks fear that a caliph in India in these days of radio would be able to broadcast speeches on the duties of Moslems, which might embarrass Ankara, and they feel that it is important to have the caliph under control of the Turkish government.

MRS. CLYDE GREATHOUSE.
[JOSEPHINE DUNN.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Josephine Dunn, movie actress and former New York show girl, caused a contempt action to be brought against her ex-husband, Clyde Greathouse, oil man, and then interrupted it this afternoon when the matter of a money settlement was introduced. She is suing Greathouse for alimony of $75 a month, which she asserts is overdue since June.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Four passengers and two pilots of the Belgrade-Bucharest passenger line were killed last night when the plane crashed near Turnu Severinu, Rumania.

3 RACKETEERS MASSACRED IN A DETROIT FLAT

Police Put Blame on Alcohol Rivals.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Three members of Detroit's once powerful Purple gang, who, police say, refused to conduct their liquor operations in accordance with gangland rules, were shot to death in a quiet apartment this afternoon in what police fear is a new outbreak of underworld warfare.

Fifteen shots were fired by the killers, believed to number four, who then fled down a rear stairway from the second floor apartment, and escaped in a sedan awaiting them in an alley.

Police identified the victims as Herman Paul, 31; Joe Lebold, alias Lebovitz, 31, and Isaac Sutker, 28, known to police as wholesale dealers in whisky and alcohol, who operated a handbook agency as a sideline.

Police said they had sold their products all over the city, and attributed the killings to the victims' refusal to confine their operations to districts into which powerful liquor interests had divided the city.

Each was shot in the back and police are working on the theory they had been lured to the apartment for what was represented to them as an amicable conference to settle differences. Two of the dead men clutched freshly lighted cigars in their hands. Another had a cigar in his mouth. A phonograph had stopped in the middle of a "blues" record.

From Sol Levine, driver of the automobile in which the three men started for a conference, to which they had been summoned by telephone, police hoped to obtain information which would identify the killers and explain the massacre. He was being questioned tonight.

He was reported to have told police that as the car carrying the three men to the conference reached busy Grand boulevard, four men boarded it, telling him to leave. Then the car drove on, presumably to the scene of the killings.

Levine, police said, was a hanger-on at the handbook agency.

The apartment was rented by a man giving his name as James Regis, on Sept. 1. Other tenants said there had been no signs of activity since then, and police held a tentative theory that it was rented for the purpose of the massacre.

The rooms were well chosen for the scene of the assassination. They were at the rear of the building with the rear stairway leading to the alley close at hand.

The Purple gang was long a power in Detroit's underworld. Scores of violent crimes have been attributed to its members within the last decade. Its power was believed broken during the last two years.

FOES OF RADICALS IN AUSTRALIA MERGE POLITICAL PARTIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Sept. 16.—Amalgamation of the Nationalist and Country parties with all other anti-extremist forces in Australia seemed at hand today. The United Australian party, as it will be called, will supplant the seven political units and is expected to show sufficient strength to upset the radical Labor party, which now controls the federal and state governments.

W. M. Hughes, Australia's wartime prime minister, will be one of the leaders of the new party in the fight for seats in the federal parliament at the elections next May.

Meanwhile the federal and various state labor governments are taking drastic steps toward the rehabilitation of industry and finance. At a bankers' meeting here today it was pointed out that the adverse trade balance has been rectified, borrowing has been drastically curtailed, and all the governments are now determined to balance their budgets. Officials insisted that Australia is gradually putting its house in order, although industry protests that it is still burdened too heavily by taxation and trades union regulations.

COLLINGS' BODY DRIFTS ASHORE TO CONTRADICT WIFE

Believed Dead When Tossed Overboard.

Wounds Raise Some Doubts.

But a preliminary report on the autopsy, given out by District Attorney Alexander G. Blue of Suffolk county indicated that Collings had been dealt such head wounds that he could not have said a word, even if they did not result in immediate death.

"The autopsy showed that a desperate struggle took place on the Penguin," said Mr. Blue. "The man was unconscious when he was bound up. That much is certain. There was no slack whatever in the rope, as there would certainly have been had he been able to struggle at all while he was being tied. The murderers trussed up a body that was already limp."

The autopsy was performed by Dr. Otto Schulze of Bellevue hospital, a post mortem expert. Mr. Blue reported him as saying that Collings had suffered a "terrific" skull fracture which extended from in front of the left ear to the top of the head.

"The blow was struck from the front," said the district attorney, "and apparently was delivered by a right-handed man. We deduce from this that Collings was standing up, facing his attacker.

An informal report from the autopsy was that Dr. Schulze believed that Collings was dead when his body was thrown into the water. It was indicated that this could not be determined positively until after the lungs are examined tomorrow.

In addition to the main head injury Dr. Schulze found a second fracture, as well as marks of six other heavy blows on Collings' skull.

"I don't think it would have been possible for any man to retain consciousness sufficiently to make any complete statement after such injuries," said District Attorney Blue.

There were numerous bruises on the arms and the legs, an indication that Collings had put up a terrific fight for life before he was beaten down.

Some Conflicting Opinions.

District Attorney Blue was still frankly skeptical of the truth of Mrs. Collings' account of the strange events of Wednesday night on the Penguin.

District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau county declared, before the autopsy was begun, that the discovery of the body confirmed Mrs. Collings' story.

Homer S. Cummings, head of the firm of Connecticut attorneys which the Collings family has engaged to advise Mrs. Collings, declared that the discovery gave Mrs. Collings' story striking corroboration.

He added that Mrs. Collings and her family would help the authorities in every way. Late tonight it was learned that the Collings family were considering offering a reward for the arrest and conviction of the murderers.

Blue Takes Charge.

The opinion of Mr. Blue is the controlling factor in the course the Collings mystery will take from now on. Because of the discovery of the body in Suffolk county, the jurisdiction in the case was definitely taken away from Prosecutor Edwards of Nassau county, who previously had been taking the lead in the investigation, and was assumed by the Suffolk county authorities.

Mr. Edwards, though reiterating his belief in Mrs. Collings' story, tonight admitted that the crime still lacked a motive.

"It is possible," he said, "that a rum running ring may have believed Collings was either a revenue agent or an independent trying to break into the business. I think that whatever happened after Collings' murderers came aboard, their visit was for the purpose of killing Collings, and the attack on his wife was an afterthought."

Called Vengeance Murder.

"That was not the work of a madman," said Inspector Harold King of Nassau county, who has conducted most of the detective investigation. "It was a vengeful murder, cold and deliberate."

Capt. Emil Morse, in command of the Nassau county homicide squad, was of the same opinion. Pointing to the bonds, with their knots cutting into the murdered man's arms and legs, he said: "That was done by some one looking for vengeance."

The possibility that Collings had secret associations which might lead any one to desire his death, either in revenge or as a means of sealing his lips, has been repeatedly scoffed at by members of the family. The supposition that he could be engaged in any under cover operations in his motor boat seemed to be negatived by the idea that he had his wife and child aboard. He did, however, make trips alone in July.

An Enigmatic Figure.

The life of Collings, however, was somewhat enigmatic. A highly educated young man of fine prospects, he retired from the practice of his profession as a marine engineer at the age of 31, when he was making only $35 a week.

With a small legacy and some money made in Wall street, he retired on an income of about $3,000 a year. He and his wife became voluntary recluses. They were almost always in each other's company, shunned social life and even avoided the parties given by their relatives.

They lived frugally. Collings owned no home and had lived with his family for some time at the residence of his sister, Helen, at Stamford. In the summers they camped on the motor boat.

District Attorney Blue announced that the inquest would begin early tomorrow afternoon. It will be held in the town hall at Huntington.

Suffolk county authorities expect to have the testimony of N. L. Noteman, New Rochelle yachtsman, who, with a company of friends, found the Penguin adrift last Thursday morning at almost the same time that Collings was thrown from it and Mrs. Collings was being shanghaied away in the "pirate" canoe.

Suggest Another Victim.

The fact that Collings was tightly bound, and moreover that he probably was dead before he reached the water, has made detectives wonder if there was another man who met death in the sound that strange Wednesday night.

The body was found at 6:45 a. m. on the white sandy beach of the Marshall Field estate by Aza Biggs Jr., watchman on the property.

The body was identified by Herbert Collings, brother, who came over from Stamford with William Kelley, law partner of Homer Cummings.

WOMAN KILLS SELF WITH A GUN TAKEN FROM OFFICER'S COAT

Mrs. May Wright, 22 years old, of 2537 West 46th place, shot and killed herself late yesterday in the home of her friend, Mrs. Mary Zenisik, 2324 West 47th street.

The weapon belonged to Robert Walters, 6409 Knox avenue, a railroad detective. He and Lawrence Kiser, 6506 Cottage Grove avenue, also a railroad detective, were questioned by the police. They said they had called at the Zenisik home to wait for Mr. Zenisik. Then they went out for tobacco they said, and Walters left his coat behind. The revolver was in his coat. On their return they found that Mrs. Wright had used the gun to kill herself.

MEDIC JOURNAL OPPOSES MORE VET HOSPITALS

Urges Cash Benefits for Illness Costs.

Measures to prevent the building of more veterans' hospitals, and instead, to house disabled service men in private hospitals under the care of their own physicians were advocated yesterday in an editorial appearing in the Journal of the American Medical association. The question is expected to come before the annual American Legion convention next week at Detroit.

Needless expense during a financial crisis and an "insidious approach" to state medicine were charged against an extension of government hospital building. A trend toward communism was another threat in the system, the editorial said.

Urge Cash Benefit System.

A system by which veterans would receive cash benefits so that they could be cared for at home, with an added sum for the support of their families, is what the physicians and many American Legion leaders want, according to Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal.

"There are at present some fifty-three veterans' hospitals with approximately 26,000 beds," the editorial read. "Because of the policy of taking care of veterans for all disabilities regardless of their service origin, the veterans' bureau estimates that 130,000 beds will be required.

Cites Costs of U. S. Hospitals.

"The average cost of construction of a hospital is from $3,000 to $3,400 a bed; the mere cost of construction will therefore approximate $500,000,000. The cost of maintenance will be well over $200,000,000 a year, not including the cost of maintenance of the staff, which would be approximately $20,000,000 a year more. At the present time there are 200,000 unoccupied beds in civilian hospitals.

"The continued building of veterans' hospital and the enlargement of the veterans' bureau constitute an insidious approach to state medicine. The actual needs of veterans will gradually be exercised by the medical provisions available. Then socialistically and communistically minded demagogues will demand that the state administer care to all individuals as it has attempted to care for veterans."

HUSBAND AND WIFE HELD.

Arthur Lande, 30 years old, 2938 Lyman avenue, and his wife, Lillian, 28 years old, were held to the grand jury yesterday on charges of manslaughter at an inquest over Joseph Remington, 31 years old, 7251 Langley avenue, who was found dead from a blow on his head Tuesday in the Lande apartment.

Lost! 23 lbs. of FAT in 10 Days!

Well Known Flint Girl Jubilant—Reduced Hips Three and a Half Inches—Reduced Bust Four Inches. Feels, Oh, So Light and Full of Pep.

Suppose you weighed 185 pounds and every time you looked in a mirror tears came into your eyes as you gazed on a huge double chin, heavy arms and legs, large hips and bust.

And suppose this over-fat condition made you too heavy for your own feet—until you felt constantly all dragged out, stomach upset with gas and indigestion, and terrific headaches. And then you tried one thing after another—and you're all ready to despair.

Such was the dilemma of Miss Dorothy Hess, 760 E. Baker St., Flint, Mich. She read about Bonkora, the one safe, natural way to take off excess poundage by cleansing wastes from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. But let her tell the story:

"I kept that bottle of Bonkora three weeks before I started it. I could not bear to have further disappointments. Then I did take it. Pleasant—very pleasant. I started to notice that my dresses were getting loose—and then when the first bottle had been used I stepped on the scales, and lo, and behold, I had lost 23 lbs.—from 185 to 162 in 10 days!"

You may not lose 23 pounds in 10 days. But if you have excess fat you can lose it in the famous "3 easy stages," as shown in this picture. For the next week, before meals, take a little Bonkora, the new Battle Creek treatment, in half a glass of water. No need to starve. Eat as much as you want. The big secret is selecting for each meal the proper combination of foods that do not clog the system and turn to fat. An almost endless choice of appealing dishes, showing you how to select the correct combinations of foods you probably like best, furnished free. Bonkora, the safe and effective method to reduce—recently perfected by a skilled chemist—contains only the choicest and most efficacious medicaments of Nature. NO thyroid or other drug that may jeopardize your health.

Simply purchase a bottle of Bonkora, the new Battle Creek treatment, at Walgreen's today—unhealthy fat will quickly disappear and with it bloat, gas, and other stomach ills. You'll feel younger; yes, you'll look younger with those bright eyes, and that clear skin and superb figure which only perfect health can impart.

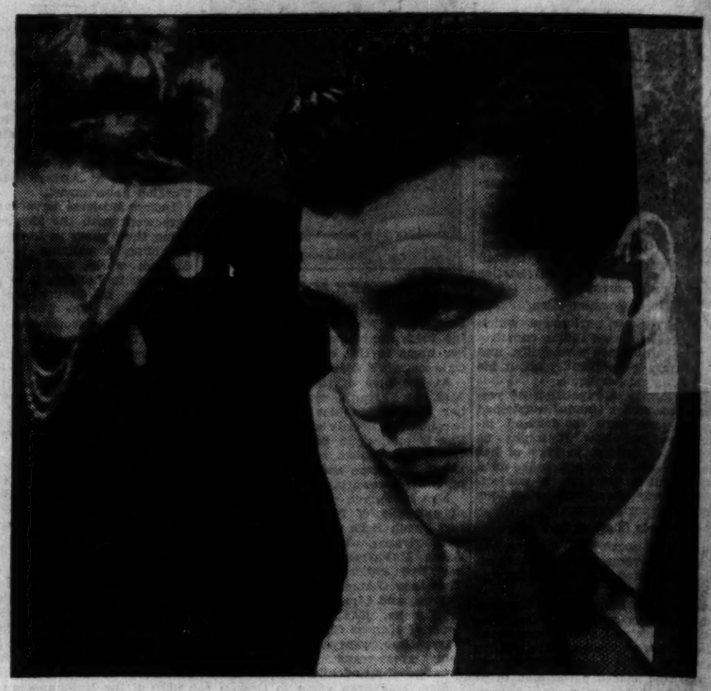
One word no Man ever said to a Woman—



BLIGHTED ROMANCES, unhappy homes, broken friendships . . . how often, how miserably often, they can be laid to that social offense for which there is no polite name.

And the most cruel part of it all is that the victim never knows . . . never understands the cause of those whisperings, those veiled hints, the loneliness of social isolation.

Personal daintiness. One of a woman's most vital problems. Protect it . . . Guard it . . .

For if you lose it you lose all chance of social acceptance.

And fresh lingerie each day is absolutely essential to daintiness. All day long underthings absorb perspiration acids and odor. A daily change is even more important than a daily bath.

And it's so easy to wear fresh lingerie every day. For Lux removes every trace of perspiration acids, its lukewarm suds protect colors and fabrics, and it takes 4 minutes or less. Make a habit of washing out your underthings and stockings in Lux each night.

Underthings absorb perspiration. Avoid offending
. . . protect daintiness this easy 4-minute way

2 Never rub dainty lingerie with cake soap. Rubbing tends to streak colors and weaken fabrics. Tests show Lux removes perspiration acids completely yet leaves colors sparkling, like new. Anything safe in water alone is just as safe in Lux.

3 Don't use too-warm water. Lux gives instant suds in lukewarm water, will not fade colors or shrink fabrics.

4 Wash this 4-minute way!

1 tablespoon of Lux diamonds does 1 day's underthings.

Dip up and down, rinse twice, squeeze in bath towel, shake out. Then they're fresh and sweet!

Try Lux FREE. Try this wonderful care for your lingerie, at our expense. Just send us your name and address, and by return mail you will receive a full-sized package of Lux free. Write today to Lever Brothers Company, Department XG-4, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

NELSON BEFORE JURY AGAIN IN BANK INQUIRY

Quizzed on Merger of Waukegan Institutions.

State Auditor Oscar Nelson yesterday reappeared before the Lake county grand jury which was reported to have named him in a true bill charging misfeasance in office and culpable omission of duty last week in its investigation of the closed Waukegan State bank. He was questioned for more than two hours and was followed by four auditors of his office.

Mr. Nelson carried into the jury room correspondence relative to the merger of the Waukegan State bank and the People's State bank of Waukegan in July of 1928. At that time he was said to have declared $363,392 of the latter bank's assets as bad paper. Officers of the Waukegan banz are reported to have testified more than $700,000 of the People's bank's assets should have been held valueless.

Quizzed on Republic Deals.

The auditor was reported to have been questioned on the relationship of the Waukegan State bank and the National Bank of the Republic, now merged with the Central Trust company as the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. He was reported to have said the Waukegan bank was merely a correspondent of the Chicago bank, and the relationship never reached affiliation. The auditor was also questioned on the reorganization of the Waukegan bank last November, at which time several witnesses have said it should have been declared insolvent.

Mr. Nelson was followed by J. A. Jaworski, auditor of his office, who examined the closed bank on Sept. 20, 1930, with Paul R. Wilkinson, also of the office. Jaworski was excused after a few minutes when he told the jury he had worked under orders of Mr. Wilkerson. Wilkerson was questioned for an hour and a half.

The jurors adjourned until tomorrow. Hugo Otte, president of the former National Republic Investment Trust, is to appear with the charter of the trust company, files, and correspondence. Others to appear are J. E. Bohle and E. P. Vollertson, employés of the Chicago bank; F. R. Curda of the Chicago Title and Trust company; Harvey Laycock, former employé of the Waukegan bank, and A. Black of the National Surety company.

Indict Son of Ariani.

Carlos Ariani, 20 years old, son of Savario Ariani, missing president of the closed First Italian State bank, was named in an indictment charging conspiracy by the Cook county grand jury. The indictment was returned before Chief Justice Harry Fisher, who set the son's bonds at $10,000.

Carlos, his mother, Mrs. Mariana Ariani, cashier of the bank, and his brother, Romolo, had been in the custody of the state's attorney's office since $138,855 of the bank's funds were discovered missing on the flight of the banker. The son was charged with conspiracy with his father and unknown others to steal the missing funds.

Mrs. Ariani and Romolo Ariani were released from technical custody at a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus in their behalf before Judge John Prystalski of the Criminal court.

ASKS JURY QUIZ

Attorney Merritt D. Metz of Hammond went before Judge Martin Smith in the Criminal court of Lake county, Ind., at Crown Point yesterday with a petition for a special prosecutor and special grand jury to investigate the affairs of the First Trust and Savings bank of Hammond, which closed last January with deposits exceeding $9,000,000.

Judge Smith continued the petition until Sept. 30 when Assistant Prosecutor John Underwood told him that the investigation by Prosecuting Attorney Robert G. Estill and the regular grand jury would be finished. That investigation has already resulted in indictments against Peter W. Meyn, president of the defunct bank; his son, Walter, and three other officials of the bank. Attorney Metz charged on behalf of two depositors of the bank that other officials are being shielded in the present investigation.

Receivers Reveal Conditions of Five More Closed Banks

State Auditor Oscar Nelson yesterday made public the conditions of five more closed banks as disclosed by reports of receivers of the various banks. The reports constitute an accounting of the stewardship of each bank receiver and are being issued as they are compiled.

George Wilson, receiver for the Commercial Trust and Savings bank, which closed May 28, listed total receipts of $464,792. He placed disbursements at $198,384, including $131,500 which he had to meet as bills payable. His itemized list of disbursements follows:

Legal expenses	$ 2,500
Clerical hire	2,933
Miscellaneous expense	2,946
Auditor's expense in closing bank	975
Bills payable paid	181,500

Henry S Savage, receiver for the Noel State bank, closed June 18, listed total receipts of $912,954 and disbursements of $465,657. He listed total resources including $447,297 in cash on hand at $5,903,017. His itemized disbursements are as follows:

Preferred claims paid	$182,000
Receiver's salary and expenses	994
Clerical hire	7,043
Miscellaneous expense	1,683
Auditor's expense in closing bank	2,370
Bills payable paid	297,968
Contra B3	60

The Chicago Trust company, receiver for the Roosevelt Bankers State bank, closed Aug. 2, 1930, listed receipts of $151,569 and disbursements at $150,293. The company's itemized reports of disbursements is as follows:

Preferred claims paid	$ 16,985
Receiver's salary and expenses	20,000
Legal expenses	15,543
Clerical hire	22,327
Miscellaneous expense	36,996
Auditor's expense in closing bank	1,500
Bills payable paid	47,000

George W. Reinecke, receiver for the Roseland State Savings bank, closed July 6, listed receipts of $395,296 and disbursements of $72,893. His itemized list of disbursements is as follows:

Preferred claims paid	$ 66,834
Clerical hire	2,188
Miscellaneous expense	1,011
Auditor's expense in closing bank	1,550
Insurance premiums advanced	1,087

Arthur A. R. Nelson, receiver for the Twelfth Street State bank, closed June 29, listed receipts of $21,933 and disbursements of $16,066. His itemized list of disbursements is as follows:

Receiver's salary and expenses	$ 256
Clerical hire	523
Miscellaneous expenses	154
Auditor's expense closing bank	300
Bills payable paid	14,792

All statements are dated Aug. 31. The statements issued yesterday with the seven released Tuesday cover 12 of the 67 closed banks in this area.

Extension of Airport Runway to Start Today

Extension of the northwest-southeast runway at Chicago airport an additional 1,700 feet is to be started this morning under supervision of John A. Casey, airport manager. The runway will have a total length of 3,400 feet when the extension is completed in thirty days, comparable to the lengths of other runways on the airport, which are, north-south and east-west, 2,500 feet, and northeast-southwest, the direction of the prevailing wind, 3,600 feet. The extension will cost about $30,000.

HOT SUMMERS HALT ADVANCE OF CORN BORER

Pest Shows Decrease in Infested Areas.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Motorists and lake steamer passengers by the hundreds of thousands who have been stopped on their westward trips from Indiana or Michigan into Illinois this summer have been wondering at the extensive precautions taken by a small army of federal employés seeking carriers of borer infested corn.

W. P. FLINT.

The travelers were told, in a formal statement issued yesterday, that while the federal agents may have been doing a thorough enough job, some of the dreaded borers have either been carried or have flown in the moth stage into Wisconsin.

Weather Halts Borer March.

With this exception, however, the march of the corn borer, which was considered three years ago so serious a menace to the corn belt, has been stopped—at least for the last two summers. And the extensive importation of parasites to fight the borer, the maintenance of a federally employed army of scouts and investigators have not been responsible for the check. Excessive heat and drought are held to be the forces which turned back the borer.

"Active scouting for the European corn borer in most of the midwestern infested areas ceased last week," says a report issued by W. P. Flint, state entomologist in charge of state efforts to keep the borer outside Illinois.

No Spread to Westward.

"Up to that time there had been a considerable spread of the insect southward in Indiana, but there was no direct spread westward.

"In Indiana the insect did not move any nearer the Illinois line than in 1929, although a considerably larger portion of Indiana has been found infested this season."

The reason assigned by entomologists for the halting of the advance and the decreasing infestation in many areas in 1930 is the weather, "particularly the very hot, dry weather when borer eggs were hatching."

Flint declares that such weather kills the young worms before they enter the cornstalks.

START SINKING FIRST CAISSON ON POSTAL SITE

Workmen yesterday started to sink the first caisson for Chicago's $16,000,000 post office which will be built over the car tracks from Van Buren street to Harrison street on the east side of Canal street. The first caisson is being sunk at the northeast corner of the site.

Caisson work will take five months, B. A. Gordon, construction manager for John Griffiths & Son, Chicago contractors, announced. During this period not more than 400 men will be needed for the work.

Mr. Gordon said that by next June 1 the actual structural work would get under way. This would mean the hiring of 2,500 more men and an additional 1,500 men on sub-contracts, he revealed.

UNDERWEIGHT . . . SKIN SO BLEMISHED
—he looked as if he had measles!

Yet one week later—a clear complexion. Two weeks later—10 lbs. gained

HE FELT bad enough before. Dog-tired, nerves screaming, weight down. But when he looked in the mirror . . . ! That face—eyes sunken, cheeks hollow—skin dotted with blemishes. Couldn't look worse if he had measles!

This may have fitted Mr. Strandberg once—but not now! For in two weeks he was on the road to a clear complexion and robust health. Let him tell about it.

"As soon as I started to take Ironized Yeast my appetite improved and the tired feeling and nervousness began to go. I also felt much stronger.

"My face used to have so many pimples that it looked like I had measles, but one week of Ironized Yeast sure did improve my complexion. In 2 weeks I gained 10 pounds. Never did I receive such results as from Ironized Yeast." Mr. Grant Strandberg, Route 1, Box 22, Gaston, Oregon.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE NEGLECTED WEST SIDE.

More than 350 deaths from automobile accidents have occurred in Cook county this year, with three and a half months still to go. There is little doubt that this year's toll will set the record. No catastrophe which the city has ever suffered has cost so many lives as will be sacrificed to traffic accidents in 1931. The number of motor deaths dwarfs the losses in the Iroquois theater or in the overturning of the Eastland.

All the lives lost in motor accidents would not have been spared if Chicago had had an elevated highway to the west; but it may be safely concluded that many of the victims would be alive today if the Austin-Kinzie highway were in existence. That road would carry as large a proportion of the west bound traffic as the outer drives carry to the north and south. To be sure, accidents do occur on the outer drives, uninterrupted by cross traffic though they are, but the number of accidents is small in proportion to the volume of traffic carried. The outer drives have saved hundreds of lives. The statistics of accidents are, on the whole, meager, but they do show that a great proportion of accidents occur at street intersections. Eliminate the crossings and you not only speed traffic but you save life as well.

In addition to the outer drives Chicago has McCormick road, Archer road and Ogden avenue as streets which are fairly free of cross traffic, because, paralleling the drainage channels, they are crossed only where bridges have been built. Thus there is comparative safety for motorists and pedestrians to the northwest and the southwest. The only direction in which no serious effort has been made to protect human life from automobile accidents is due west from the center of the city, a region of great population and traffic density and therefore an ideal setting for motor accidents.

Millions of dollars collected from Chicago motorists in gasoline taxes are lying idle in the state treasury, waiting to be spent on remote country roads. Meanwhile the most densely populated section of the state is without an adequate motor road, men who might find work in building the Austin-Kinzie road are exhausting their savings and the death toll in Chicago continues to mount to unprecedented heights. A special session of the legislature could authorize the expenditure of the money on the elevated highway. Failure to do so is evidence of a shocking indifference to public welfare and safety.

RAILWAY SPEED.

Inspired, perhaps, by the triumphs of British airmen, the British railroads are going after speed records on the rails. The latest is that of the "Cheltenham Flyer" of the Great Western railway, which it is asserted has set a new world record for start to stop run. It covered 77½ miles from Swindon to London in 58½ minutes, an average speed of 79.23 miles per hour.

The American record seems to be 79 miles for a 50 mile run, in 1905, by No. 18, Pennsylvania lines, with three cars. Another Pennsylvania express made an average of 77.83 miles per hour over 131 miles. "Death Valley" Scott's special train on a run from Los Angeles to Chicago ran 2.5 miles at a speed of 106 miles per hour. We do not know what the world record is for short spurts, if there is one, but it would be hard to beat 106 miles.

Our interest, however, is in average running time on regular service. We believe American schedules for first class trains are slower than British and some continental railways, and it is not denied that they could be much faster without changes of equipment. The French are experimenting with improvements in material and design to increase speed and are now trying rubber tires, which have produced promising results. We are told that Americans are speed mad, but our railroads have certainly not responded to the public weakness and for years have not increased speed. On the contrary, important trains, like the Chicago-New York de luxe expresses, run slower than when they were established.

Making all due allowance for the reduction of railroad revenue and other tribulations of our overregulated railroads, it has repressed more than circumstances warrant railroad enterprise and the eager search for improvement, especially in passenger service. Confronted by the increasing competition of the automobile, and now the airplane, railroad management has been more prone to complain than fight back. Transport is now a commodity under intense competition and success cannot be won by standing still or even retreating. The Pullman company, with its active experimentation in new models and in air cooling, is one of the few representatives of American railway transportation that seems to be facing conditions and forging ahead. Conceding the handicaps under which the railroads are laboring, and the urgent need for freeing them from unreasonable and efficiency-destroying regulations, the fact remains that their worst enemy is their own defeatism.

SECURITY FIRST.

Since our government is exerting its diplomacy to insure the holding of another conference on international limitation of armament it is important that the American people give serious attention to the issues certain to be raised, and indeed already vigorously debated in Europe. Among these is one upon which the French viewpoint has differed from ours. To many Americans it looks rather academic. The French know it is most practical. In terms of French policy it may be described as the rule of security first.

In other words, the French theory is that armament limitation and especially armament reduction must depend upon and follow, not precede, agreements of mutual aid. For France there is no sufficient security in the league covenant, the Locarno pact, or the Briand-Kellogg treaty renouncing war as an instrument of policy. She must have something more reliable and her government already has formally announced that it will not reduce its present forces and program unless she gets it. Nothing of any importance in the way of reduction of armament can be expected from the February conference unless France's wishes are substantially fulfilled.

Our government is not thinking on these lines. It considers that reduction in armament is a condition precedent to security, adopting the pacifist theory that armament makes wars and that all we need do is abolish armies and navies to insure peace. Our government realizes that the American people has no intention of insuring the security of France or any other country. It realizes that, in spite of our pacifists, no agreement to use American forces to keep the peace in Europe has the slightest chance of adoption by any conceivable vote of the senate, much less by the American people. So, being bent on limitation and reduction, it is shirking this issue and carefully avoids presenting it to the nation in time for public discussion. It is determined to enter the conference as free as possible from the restraint of a public opinion which wisely fears political entanglement in the European network of fears, interests, and ancient hostilities.

French statesmanship makes the security of France a sine qua non and fully realizes that the various conventions and treaties purporting to do away with war do not insure it. Her position is stronger at this time than it has been for generations and her statesmen show no inclination not to use her strength to the limit for France. France has wanted since the late war began an American underwriting, and she will try to exact it in payment for any concessions our government asks at Geneva. That our present government would pay the price we do not doubt, but as it would not be countersigned by congress, much less the nation, the conference can have no substantial result, except to add to the long list of concessions exacted from us without adequate compensation at previous conferences.

That all this proceeding makes practically for the peace of the world even in a general way we most seriously doubt. There is no doubt that it has resulted in the gradual weakening of our defense, both absolutely and relatively to other great powers. Our pacifists, assuming that the American nation cannot be trusted to use its strength with wisdom or justice, think the military enfeeblement of the United States makes for world peace. We do not believe the American people are possessed by that delusion, and it is time for them to realize its influence upon our course of action in foreign affairs.

That is one aspect of the conduct of our foreign affairs. The other, even more obvious when concrete results are examined, is the influence of subserviency upon those who have represented us in most of these international contests. Only in the counsels of the United States are the vital interests of a nation in the hands of men more anxious to win the applause of foreigners than to stand strongly and self-respectingly for the interests of their own nation.

Editorial of the Day

[The Minneapolis Tribune.]

Minnesota's principal agricultural industry, dairying, is once more leading the way back to better prices and more profitable farming. In the last three months the prices for butterfat have increased more than 40 per cent and at a time when most other commodities are selling at low price levels this piece of news is of great significance to Minnesota agriculture. Dairying is the largest single source of income for most Minnesota farmers.

On Sept. 4 choice butter was bringing 29 cents on the Minneapolis market, which was a gain of 10 cents over the price last spring. The New York market was offering 31½ cents and Chicago 29½ cents for the best grades of butter. Last spring the butter market touched its lowest price level since before the war, but in a comparatively short time the price began its gradual climb upward. Drought damage to pastures, which reduced the output of milk in some sections, has helped in stiffening the butterfat price.

The place of the dairy cow in agriculture as one of the factors that can be depended upon to add stability to the farm income has again been convincingly demonstrated at a time when it can be most appreciated. Though prices for butter are 12 and 15 cents below the high averages achieved during 1928 and 1929, the steady gain this product has been making in the last few months is most encouraging, particularly when other commodity prices are considered. With the prices of feeds lower than ever before in the history of dairying and a steady demand for dairy products insuring a good market, the farm that raises dairy cows has a dependable source of income. And every dollar of that income will buy more goods now than at any other time since before the war. Certainly when one looks at the United States as a whole there is reason for feeling encouraged over the position which the northwest holds in relation to other sections.

CAN YOUR FAMILY CARRY ON?

A CERTAIN very large business, now in the hands of the second generation, is trying to choose members of the third generation for training in leadership. The founder of the business was a dynamic human being, but he deviated considerably from a well balanced personality.

Starting with nothing, he built up one of the great businesses of the world; a business on the welfare of which hangs the security, the economic future, and the welfare [in many ways] of thousands of people. He was a great big animal—tireless, energetic, with great endurance, heavy muscles, shrewdness, foresight, strategy, ability to organize, leadership, courage. He had aggressiveness, an irresistible drive, mechanical ability, imagination, and good judgment. He was selfish in the sense that he wanted to have his way. No one can question his loyalty to the business he built up.

He begot a large family of children, several of whom were boys. This, in a sense, was loyalty to the business, since he kept financial control and he provided legal heirs to carry it on. Perhaps his imagination did not go beyond that point, for he did not take the trouble to train these sons for the operation of the business that he had taken to build the best machine possible for the trade.

However, among the numerous sons enough were found for successful leadership of the business. Now the time is approaching when some one in the third generation must be decided upon, and then specially trained for the head place, and others must be selected and trained for leadership of some of its divisions.

All of this is for the purpose of introducing the thought that the dominating, compelling men who head great enterprises should select wives who are likely to breed men who can be trained for leadership. They should select from their progeny those who have the intellectual ability and the personality required for the conduct of the business. They should especially train those so selected for the work and, finally, if the individual selected fails to take training, he should be set aside or scrapped, while another is chosen in his stead and trained for the work.

The man with the power to create a great business should have the wisdom to see that that which he has builded is due to be wrecked unless he, the founder, has some regard for genetics and the efficacy of training. Men of this dominant type are fond of raising horses, or other animals, as an avocation—the project through which they get relaxation and diversion of interest. When they lay aside business management, and put on the rôle of stock raisers, they never forget the principles of breeding and training.

SWELLING FEET.

Mrs. A. C. M. writes:

1. What causes the feet to swell?

2. I attributed it to hot weather, but of late I am bothered with a pain across my back which bothers me only when I am lying down. It is an occasional pain and may be only a touch of lumbago.

REPLY.

1. Among the very important causes are heart and Bright's diseases. Among the less important are varicose veins, obstruction in the pelvis, wearing tight garters and other tight bands. Among the still less important causes is hot weather.

2. Probably this is lumbago, or rheumatism of the back muscles.

HOME BREW AND BABIES.

Mrs. K. writes: Aside from the legal part of it, what do you think of giving small children from 2 to 12 years, or even older, home brewed beers?

Do you think it has any ill effects on adults if taken in moderate amounts—say a pint bottle at dinner and supper or lunch?

REPLY.

1. Nothing can be said for it and much can be said against it.

2. Home brew is a pretty poor product and likely to contain almost anything short of pictures on the wall.

PROBABLY IS RINGWORM.

B. M. G. writes: What will cure moist eczema? I have an attack of this on the toes of my left foot.

REPLY.

I judge you have ringworm of the feet. Maybe you don't read the w. k. newspapers.

DOGS THAT BITE.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—[Friend of the People.]—In our yard, where my 3 year old son plays, there are three vicious dogs tied. None have licenses. The barking day and night is terrible. The yard has no fence around. Any one coming in the yard is snapped at by these dogs. Last week my little boy was bitten on the cheek by one of the dogs. I am afraid to let the boy out in the yard to play. Can anything be done about this?

C. B.

Officers assigned to investigate report that one of the dogs is a stray, but that they located the owners of the other two. One of the owners has a license, but the other was summoned and his case is still pending. We interviewed the complainant and she is satisfied with the action taken. The officer on post will continue watching this place and see that the children are not in danger of the dogs in the future.

JOHN H. ALCOCK,
Acting Commissioner of Police.

NOT YOUR LOSS.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—We own a mortgage on a house and the interest was due June 1, which they paid to the bank that sold us the mortgage. Due to sickness I did not go to the bank to collect. This bank closed June 11. I still have the coupon. Who must file claim for the money? S. C.

On the bare facts stated there would be no authority for them to pay the money to the bank. Hence the loss would be theirs. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. By AA

"BAA!" SAID GANDHI.

[An Interview with the Mahatma by the Line's Special Correspondent in London.]

I succeeded in grabbing Gandhi by the horns just as he was abounding and abutting in front of St. James's palace.

"Mr. Gandhi," I said, "what do you think of the round table conference?"

"Baa!" said the Mahatma, drinking a quart of goat's milk and throwing the dipper at my head, "Baa!"

"Do you not believe," I asked, "that England will object to your butting in like this?"

Gandhi drew his loin cloth closer around him, drank another quart of goat's milk. Hurling the dipper at me as before, he again uttered his characteristic reply, "Baa!"

"You may baa me all you please, Mr. Gandhi," I said, "but you cannot baa England. I wish to ask you, Mr. Gandhi, do you not think if you wore shirts and nighties and undies and things like that instead of that loin cloth you would give employment to people in the cotton factories of England and help the world get back to prosperity?"

Mr. Gandhi sat for a long time in silence. I feared he was about to have another day of it, but he finally drank another quart of goat's milk, and as he threw the dipper at me he answered my question thus: "Baa!"

"But," said I, "I wish your opinion on the round table. Do you not think that it should be square? On a round table the Indian conference can just keep going round and round and not get anywhere, while on a square table——"

I jumped and ran down the street before he could throw the dipper at me. But as I turned around for a last look he shook his head and said, "Baa!"

GIRL IN A BOOKSHOP.

Around her wars were waged and wars were won,
Young romance flowered and gay adventure spun,
The world like a bright tapestry unrolled
Before her in its splendors manifold;
She saw the storm-lashed fleets put out to sea,
And heard the clash of swords in rivalry,
Through pages rife with pulse and surge of life
She strolled serene, nor felt the distant strife:
Cool-eyed, aloof, impervious to love,
She went through life, yet played no part thereof.

THIS CHANGING WORLD! It used to be when sailors said the grub wasn't fit to eat and they weren't getting enough pay they hanged 'em at the yardarm. But today the British admiralty instructed the navy officers to talk it over with the boys and fix up the pay situation so that everybody will be happy. John Bull is very sensible; he's got troubles enough without a mutiny on his hands.

AND, ANYHOW, if things keep on the way they're going we needn't be afraid of our navy kicking up a row about its pay and refusing to take the ships to sea. By next spring if our navy starts any trouble like that we'll send the police out in a rowboat to arrest him and bring him ashore and sling him in the hoosegow for thirty days.

How Do They Tread That Way?

"HOLD HOST AND HOSTESS in Killing of Guest."—Chievenuze. But, really, the perfect host and hostess should welcome a guest with a smile, fill his visit with happiness, and speed him joyfully on his way. Almost any writer on social matters will tell you that the perfect host and hostess seldom kill their guests. Not even if they use the best towels for brushing their shoes or keep asking for more chicken at dinner when there isn't any more. Of course, after the guest is gone even the most perfect hostess may say: "The dirty bum! When he gets invited here again he's a-goin' to know it," and the host may say, "I'd a liked to have knocked that bird for a row of ash cans"; but, mark you, not even Emily Post would ever say that a host and hostess should kill their guests.

IT IS INTERESTING to watch the wets' and drys' reaction on England's troubles. The drys say that if England had the eighteenth amendment in force she wouldn't have any trouble at all, because the sailors wouldn't get drunk when they go ashore and start mutinying, and the wets say that if England wasn't getting tax money out of the sale of likker she'd be on the street with a hand organ, a monkey, and a cup right now. Roll your own.

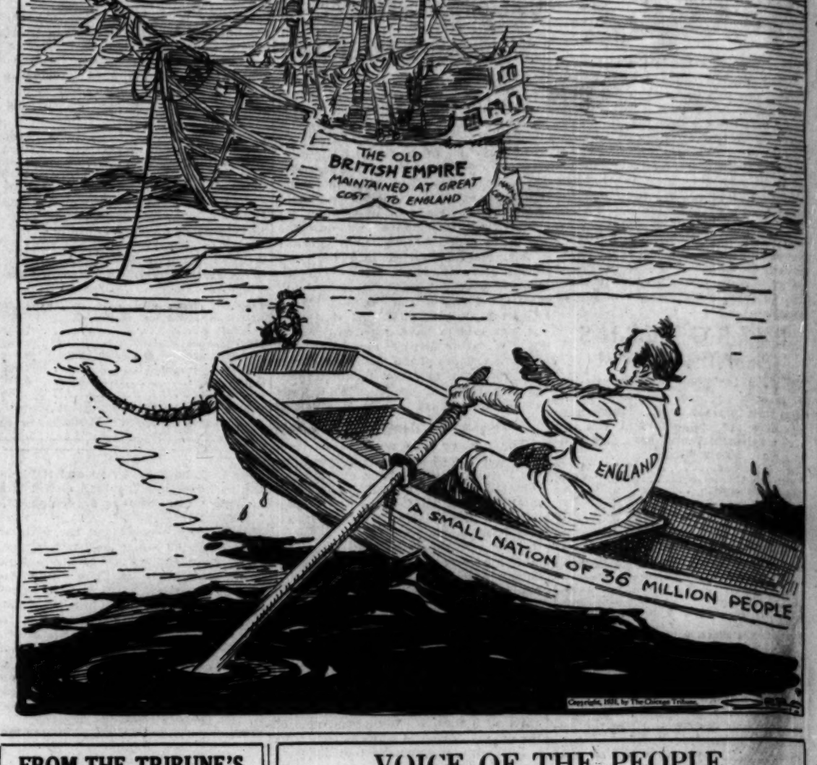
STILL TOWING THE OLD HULK



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPT. 17, 1915.

ROME.—Noncombatants were ordered out of Trent, which is threatened by the Italians and is overcrowded with refugees from Rosegno, Levico and Caldonazzo. The evacuation of Rovereto is now complete.

CHICAGO.—Packing houses of this city determined on two lines of resistance to the decision of the British prize court ordering confiscation of two cargoes of meat valued at $2,500,000. The British court's decision is said to cover also $12,000,000 worth of additional meat products in 30 other captured cargoes. The packers announced that their lawyers in England would appeal the decision to the privy council and also send two lawyers to Washington to lay the case before Secretary Lansing with the contention that the confiscation by Great Britain is a violation of international law and the principle of the freedom of the seas for which President Wilson contends.

LONDON.—Hard battles are being fought all along the eastern front from Riga to the Rumanian border. While the Germans continue to advance slowly in the north and center the Russians in the south are repeating their successes against the Austro-German armies which are being driven back across the Stripa river in Galicia and have been forced to retire westward, north of the Galician frontier.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1901.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Over a route 420 miles in length, amid the tolling of bells and through endless lanes of mourning people that at every town, village and hamlet lined the track far out into the fields, the funeral train that bore both a dead and a living President traveled from Buffalo to Washington today in a journey that is destined to be recorded as a dramatic episode in one of the saddest tragedies in American history. It was a solemn pageant all the way from Buffalo up over the Alleghenies, down into the broad valley of the Susquehanna, and on to the marble city on the banks of the shining Potomac. It was the murdered President McKinley's last journey to the seat of the government over which he presided for four and one-half years. Fully half a million persons saw the train during its trip today. At many cities and towns school children and young women had strewn flowers on the track, hiding the rails, and the engine wheels cut their way through the fragrant masses of blooms spread out to show the love felt for the dead President. Work was suspended in field and mine and city. The schools were dismissed. A million flags at half mast dotted hillside and valley and formed a thicket of color over the cities. And from almost every banner streamed a bit of crepe. The funeral train left Buffalo at 8:30 o'clock this morning and arrived at Washington at 8:38 o'clock tonight. The body of the dead President rests tonight for the last time in the mansion where for more than four years he lived as quietly as the circumstances of his office would permit. The coffin lies in the spacious east room, the largest chamber of the White House, where he had time and again received the friendly homage of his fellow citizens.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 17, 1881.

LONG BRANCH, N. J.—President Garfield has had a slight relapse and, while there is no marked change in his condition, it is not reassuring. "I should think that he is a little worse," said Dr. D. W. Bliss, "and I can't say whether he will be better in the morning." Only once before has the surgeon in charge expressed so much anxiety over the President's case. The pulse and temperature fluctuated unfavorably during the day and were higher in the evening. The President's mind is wandering again.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Members of President Garfield's cabinet were notified by Attorney General MacVeagh of the President's serious condition and it is expected that they will all return to Long Branch today.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The funeral of Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside took place here and the ceremonies were extremely impressive. Veteran organizations, state and city officials, and a large cortége of citizens accompanied the hearse through the streets.

OLD PULLMAN.

Peotone, Ill., Sept. 13.—As a resident of Roseland during the past five years, I was much interested in the Sunday article by Betty Browning. She evidently looked the place over, but when she compared old Pullman with a boom town after the boom was over I thought her judgment quite amiss. Has she ever seen a boom town, with its tar paper shacks trimmed with silvery nails? For more than thirty years I have, at not infrequent intervals, looked at old Pullman from the windows of Illinois Central trains, and for the last five years I've seen it rather frequently, afoot and in auto. The architectural unity and substantial building are charming. She speaks of it as faded; I should say, rather, mellowed by time. Only a few streets in Roseland have better trees, and many of the houses have had time to grow ivy on their walls. The old Florence hotel has had more of a part in Chicago's history than almost any other landmark on the far south side. By the "block long tenement buildings" I presume she means the semi-detached houses, which are artistically superior to detached houses built so close together that the windows admit air but very little light, of which Chicago offers so many depressing examples. When she says that they contrast strikingly with the workman's bungalow, she might add, to the disadvantage of the latter. It must be a jaundiced eye that can prefer the mushroom bungalow, with Queen Anne front and Mary Ann sides and rear, to the good red brick all around of the Pullman homes, with their slate roofs and interesting chimneys. One thinks of old Pullman as an example of how attractive a community can be, even though wedged in by factories and starting at the level hill of a railroad embankment.

The writer speaks of the conglomerate population of old Pullman, but I think a careful canvass of the community would show that all the families whose names begin with Mac or Mc have not yet died or moved into bungalows.

There is plenty of Roseland that, like Topsy, just growed, but not well planned old Pullman. Rather than deterioration I hope to see restoration for it in the future, and a prideful appreciation in something that is both old and artistically good.

So much of the architectural history of various stages of Chicago's growth can be read by the eye in Roseland that, should your Betty Browning care to decipher it, my services as chauffeur are offered.

MYRA ADAMS WHITWORTH.

HE WANTS ANOTHER LAW.

Maywood, Ill., Sept. 12.—The only way to cure the depression so it will stay cured is to reduce hours. We also know that the employer who will work his help long hours furnishes unfair competition and compels his fellow employers to maintain long hours also. That leaves only one course. Congress must enact the 40 hour week into law, providing that any employer working his employés more than eight hours in one day, or 40 hours in one week, must pay double time for all overtime, with a minimum of $2 an hour for all overtime.

A CROSS BEHIND THE MOON.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—How many, if any, saw the cross in back of the moon on Sunday night, Aug. 30? It was a perfectly shaped cross, seen distinctly from our windows, overlooking the lake. The features of the moon were clearer than we saw them for a long time, and the moon had a smiling face. We saw the cross constantly from 9 to 11 o'clock.

If I am told correctly, a cross was seen in the heavens previous to the world war, and mention of it was made in the press.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—In the Sept. 10 issue of THE TRIBUNE there was an article entitled: "Students Seek More Skill to Enter Business" and "Break Registry Records in Vocational Courses."

Supt. Bogan said, "The schools can't keep pace with the demand for vocational training." If Supt. Bogan believes this is true why did he deem it necessary to take four vocational advisers off the list in an effort to cut school expenses?

$500,000 WORTH FOR NOTHING.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Mr. Doherty wants to give some one $500,000 to determine what is the matter with business. Get rid of the Brookharts, La Follettes, Norrises, Shipsteads, Longs, Murrays, and all of their kind, guarantee there will be none such for a half century and business will boom over night. Tell Mr. Doherty not to send me the $500,000. I don't want some one to start regulating me.

FREE RIDES FOR TEACHERS.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—The policemen, firemen, and mail carriers all ride free of charge on the street cars, and they are getting paid at least fairly regularly. Why not the teachers, too? After the worry all summer of trying to pay rent, food, and other bills on nothing, it is hard to be expected to go back to work, pay carfare, dress appropriately, face fifty or more children with cheerfulness and equanimity—still with no salary in view.

WIDOW ADMITS SHE INSTIGATED MATE'S SLAYING

Jealous Youth Her Willing Agent, Both Say.

Hackensack, N. J., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. Olga Ziegler, a small, quiet woman of 38 confessed today that she had instigated the slaying last night of her husband, Otto, father of their two children, outside their home at Park Ridge, N. J. She said that he had made life unbearable for her by his attentions to other women.

"Either you must kill him or I will," she admitted having told George Flanard, 21 year old employé in the silk label factory in which Ziegler was a partner. Flanard had confessed earlier in the day that he had fired the fatal shots and had implicated Mrs. Ziegler as having plotted the crime.

Flanard accepted her ultimatum in order to break up an affair Ziegler had been carrying on with Ruth Herbst of Westwood, N. J., a recent divorcée to whom Flanard had been engaged, the youth told Special Prosecutor Loeche of Berven county.

Corroborated by Others.

The confessions came after an all night grilling of the pair by police and county detectives and have been corroborated by evidence that includes a witness who saw Flanard fleeing from the scene of the crime and the recovery from a lake of the pistol he used.

The case will be presented to the grand jury beginning next Tuesday, Mr. Loeche announced. The slaying, the first in the quiet residential town of Park Ridge since 1886, has aroused public feeling.

The first slip in the mystery which at first enveloped the shooting of Ziegler as he was walking from his garage to his home came from Mrs. Ziegler. At first she professed that she knew nothing about it and that she had been in the house with her children, Helen, 5, and William, 4.

Under prolonged questioning she wavered and told detectives she believed Flanard had done it. The police sent an alarm for him and he was picked up in an automobile with a friend named Emil Stonky in Westwood.

See Slayer Fleeing.

After a neighborhood youth had told of hearing a note from Mrs. Ziegler to Flanard, and George Zuzek, who has a garage nearby, had identified Flanard as the man he saw running from the scene, the youth broke down and made a full confession, police said.

Flanard said he had been enraged at Ziegler because of the latter's attentions to Miss Hering, who only last week obtained a divorce from a man named Prudhomme.

Ziegler and Miss Hering frequently had visited a roadhouse, Flanard said, and after he had demonstrated with Miss Hering without result he consulted Mrs. Ziegler, who suggested that he have the place raided while they were there. He refused, but when Miss Hering learned that he had been discussing this possibility she returned his ring, Flanard said.

Subsequently he discovered that she and Ziegler were planning a trip to Canada together and then he and Mrs. Ziegler talked over "how they could prevent it." Flanard felt that under the circumstances the task was up to him, he told the detectives. He said that he hid in the Ziegler garage until the manufacturer returned home from the New York office. After the shooting he fled on foot and threw the pistol into the lake.

County Clerk Sweitzer Takes Rest in Hospital

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer has been a patient at St. Anne's hospital since Saturday, it was learned last night. He became ill as he was about to leave his home and was sent to the hospital for a rest, members of his family said. His condition has improved since, it was said at the hospital.

MAP CEREMONIAL FOR MUSSOLINI'S VISIT WITH POPE

Two Editors Lose Jobs as Result of Accord.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 16.—The resignations of several personalities, who were compromised in the recent controversy between the holy see and Italy in order to make certain that no new disputes may arise to mar the agreement reached two weeks ago, may be expected shortly, according to Vatican authorities tonight.

Premier Benito Mussolini's visit to Pope Pius XI., for which a program of ceremonials has already been drawn up, and which is expected to occur in the next few days, is intended to set the seal of cordiality on a new phase of relations between the church and the state.

Vatican Editor to Quit.

Among the resignations which will take place shortly is that of Conte Dalle Torre, for many years director of the official Vatican organ, Osservatore Romano. Dalle Torre has been one of the most bitter opponents of Fascism, and his resignation is expected to be especially pleasing to the Mussolini government. During the quarrel between the holy see and the Fascists last summer Dalle Torre remained exclusively within the confines of Vatican City, and there were reports of a fight which he had with the Fascists one night, after which he sought refuge inside the Vatican walls.

Another important resignation will be that of Padre Rosa, Jesuit editor of the magazine Civilita Cattolica. Padre Rosa has also been one of Fascisms bitter enemies. During the raids made last May the Fascists and students broke into the offices of his magazine, tore up the files and dragged out a picture of the pope.

Friend of Fascism Chosen.

As director of the magazine Padre Rosa will be replaced by Padre Barbera whose ideas about Fascism are more temperate.

These changes follow the general provisions of the new accord in which assurances were given by the Vatican that no one adverse to Fascism will have anything to do with the direction of the Catholic Action clubs.

Jumps from Seventeenth Floor of Loop Building

A man tentatively identified by papers on his person as Frank Rosicki, 717 Temple street, leaped to his death yesterday from the seventeenth floor of the Chicago Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Miss Bertha Nielson, an employé in an office on the seventeenth floor, saw the man, who wore rough clothing, climb to the window sill and drop. He landed on the roof of that portion of the building housing the First Methodist temple, four stories above the street.

PRISON RECORDS SHOW POWERS IS FORMER CONVICT

Bluebeard's Past Bared by Fingerprints.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Fingerprints today proved conclusively that Harry F. Powers, mail order Romeo, was Herman Drenth, formerly of Oran, Ia., who served a term in the Wisconsin penitentiary in 1921 and 1922 for burglary, county and city police officers announced. He had robbed a woman he was courting.

The announcement was made after fingerprints of Powers taken at the Harrison county jail were compared with prints taken of Drenth while he was in the Wisconsin prison.

It is certain that the Herman Drenth, who served the term in the Wisconsin prison and the Harm Drenth of Iowa are one and the same person. The Drenths originally came from Holland, and it is believed that the name Harm was changed to Herman. William Drenth, 68, a farmer living near Oran, Ia., had stated in newspaper interviews that he believed Powers is his son, Harm. The elder Drenth says he sent his son to America from Holland to cure him of drinking, which, he said, was his worst fault. He described Harm as a woman hater.

Rita La Roy of Films, Actors' Agent, Will Wed

Three Chicago Girls Return to Sing Operas

Three young Chicago singers who triumphed in the first of the Chicago Civic opera European scholarship contests returned to Chicago yesterday from study abroad. They will be among the new members to be heard with the Civic Opera company when the season opens. They are Lydia Mihm, Helen Ornstein and Leola Turner.

Funds to provide their post-graduate musical education were provided through an endowment established by Stanley Field, Ernest R. Graham, Louis B. Kuppenheimer, Samuel Insull and Edward F. Swift.

—o—

The three young women were greeted at the New York Central station in New York by their families and friends, whom they had not seen for two years. All had made operatic debuts in Italian theaters. Miss Turner sang at La Scala in Milan, and just before sailing all three, with Serafina di Loe, another addition to the Chicago Civic opera this season, participated in an open air concert in St. Mark's square in Venice before an audience of ten thousand. The concert was given for the benefit of the Fascist charities for the province in which Venice is situated.

The Chicago Civic opera European scholarships are a part of a general program for operatic education in Chicago. They are limited to young artists who show promise of operatic talent and who have studied for forty weeks in Cook county prior to each contest.

Two other comparatively recent departures in the training program of the civic opera are the ballet school and the chorus school. Twelve scholarships are provided in the ballet school.

Girl Loses Boy Friend to Her Best Girl Chum; Wonders What to Do

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"My boy friend and I had a date the evening. I took my girl friend along. She is lively and gay and knows how to show the boys a good time. So, my boy friend made a date with her. And he hasn't come back to me. What would you do?

"BLONDE."

—o—

Well, I'd just say, "Good-by, boy; we had a good time while it lasted and may my successor have the same."

The better face you can put on an incident of that sort, the quicker you'll chalk up another boy friend victory for yourself. Just don't moon around about it and get a mad on at the girl. That won't get you anywhere. If you act like a discarded sweetie the other boys will treat you like one.

You've always got to keep up that glamour of being wanted. Which you can do with a cheerful face and not do very well without one.

By now you know it isn't always wise to include the gay and charming girl friend. It may be generous, but not especially wise. A lot of good men have been lost to the original magnet by including a friend in the chummy little dates. All right on foursomes, or parties—but twosomes should be that if you're ambitious to capture your man. However, if it wasn't this girl, it might have been another.

What generally happens as a sequence to such incidents is that the two girls fall out. The disappointed one turns a bit sour and says unkind things abou the other. Which isn't clever, really. Naturally, there'll be a hurt and a "feeling" against the other. But the clever trick is to keep from expressing it in any one's hearing.

This help a lot, too, in recovering your own self-confidence. Which is what one feels the need of most after one's best beau has been taken from under one's very eyes.

$500,000 Aurora Hospital to Be Dedicated Sunday

The new St. Joseph hospital in Aurora, built at a cost of $500,000, will be dedicated Sunday afternoon, it was announced yesterday. The Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, bishop of the Rockford diocese, will give the principal address at the ceremonies. The hospital is the first of three institutions to be built in Aurora for the care of the sick.

Parisienne Likes to Add Print to Silk Ensemble

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—While a great many all printed silk dresses and suits have been worn in Paris, the most fashionable ensemble is that which combines some printed silk with a quantity of plain. A plain silk frock with printed silk sleeves and belt is a combination that is seen frequently, and if worn with a jacket, the jacket is plain, but lined with printed silk. There is no doubt about it, the really chic Parisienne likes her printed materials applied to the ensemble with a certain economy.

The ensemble, shown in our sketch, illustrates the amount and distribution of printed silk, on the fashionable day time ensemble, as worn in Paris.

This dress and coat are made of royal blue silk crêpe. The coat, shown in the background, is three-quarters length. Lots of distinguished women like their ensemble coats just this long. It is a plain, straight coat with bishop sleeves, and is lined with printed crêpe, showing a tiny design in red and blue. The scarf collar with its long ends is the only printed material showing on the coat.

The dress has lower sleeves of printed silk, with wide turn back cuffs of plain royal blue crêpe at the bottom of the sleeves. This, and the printed collar, are considered enough to give chic to a summer frock. The skirt of this dress, with its three-quarter length tunic, just the length of the coat, is one of Worth's big successes. The under skirt is quite narrow.

Printed silk, applied like this, will give life and chic to an old silk ensemble.

Love Story of Daniel Webster Basis of Novel

Fielding His Retort to Woman's Sharp Words.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Black Daniel," by Honore W. Morrow. [Morrow.] Published today.

"BLACK DANIEL" is a fictionized section of the life of Daniel Webster, a figure in American history about whom biographers have done a good deal of fluttering. Whether he was the pure-souled crusader using his armor of a brilliant tongue and a keen mind for the glory of his country or a gentleman who liked the shine and glitter of the coat of mail and glory for himself before his country's is a question which apparently hasn't been settled satisfactorily to date.

HONORE W. MORROW.

Mrs. Morrow in "Black Daniel" is not concerned, however, with Daniel Webster's motives. She frankly calls the book in its subtitle "The Love Story of a Great Man," and she devotes herself to the chronicle of his idyllic aged love for Caroline Le Roy and his marriage to her.

Mrs. Morrow sees her hero and makes her readers see him as an extraordinarily handsome and popular man, at the height of his political and legal successes, the father of three children, the most respected man in Massachusetts, and one of the most sought up to in Washington. We meet him at the moment of his greatest spiritual ebb, when, cast down by the death of his wife to a point of wishing to retire from public life, his brother Ezekiel dies and hurls him into the lowermost pit of hatred for everything that politics means. His accumulation to give up all connection with public life, to settle quietly on his farm, to devote himself entirely to his law practice, and to try to find spiritual peace in nature is strengthened by scurrilous rumors of an affair between him and an English woman in Washington.

The hero of "Black Daniel" is presented to us at that moment which comes in every life when things look as if they were about as bad as they could possibly be.

By that destiny that is always tacking our ends into shape he puts a woman of thirty-odd, beautiful, proud, who is clever enough to make him furious with her first words. You can't forget anybody whom you want to beat. Caroline was just insulting enough to call up ideas of beating, not the more amorously protective ones of spanking. There was nothing of the small child about her. She was a lady who, if she hadn't been a lady, but a gentleman—if you get what I mean—to whom Mr. Webster would have given a good smashing wallop, if he hadn't been a gentleman. Their romance started with harsh words and it ended in marriage, a reverse action to most romances of today.

Mrs. Morrow describes Daniel Webster in the same way that she described Abraham Lincoln in that series of novelized facts which began with "Forever Free" [wasn't it?] and ended with "The Last Full Measure." She treats her historical characters exactly as if they were characters in a novel, not as if they were rolling clouds of text book glory behind them. To be sure, her heroes are through heroes. She never takes the popular method way of making out all rascals and scoundrels, although she did a pretty good job of working up Mary Todd Lincoln for the mild and fuss-budget and thorn in her husband's side.

Mr. Webster in "Black Daniel" is one of the most shining glory. He has an ignoble thought and his deeds are those of a Galahad. But the day which Mrs. Morrow is chronicling was a day when people were not saints or sinners. Stevenson's there's as much good in the worst of us and as much bad in the best of us would have been considered in bad taste as most undermining to our social structure. Mrs. Morrow writes also in the style of that period. Not only are the conversations which she records rolled in the mellifluousness of that day but her prose has a quality of expansiveness about it.

Naturally there is much about Webster as an orator in the book and the soaring beauty of his oratory is evident even in snatches of his speeches which are recorded. The famous reply to Hayne is one of the great orations in American history, and as its fine flow through the pages it is easy to understand Chief Justice John Marshall's assurance that his friend, Webster, had saved the constitution. Many may be out of date these days but Webster's has a quality of sincerity about it as well as stirring public appeal. I shouldn't be surprised if readers of "Black Daniel" were led to the library and dug up the thirteen volumes of the works of Daniel Webster which, except for a few pages of letters, are filled with fine speeches. There's literary gold in them thar volumes.

Good morning!

Well, three cheers for old Gramp' Summerill, star witness in the case of the People versus Maxey Campo, gangster killer!

His whole family reneges on identifying in court the man they saw do the shooting and, later, met face to face as he sought refuge in their home. But not Gramp'. No sir-ee! He sticks by his guns just as he did in the battle of Bull Run, by gum! He foils the police, rescues his grandson from Campo's allies, and, at the eleventh hour, when the accused is just about to be turned scot free, limps into action as IS action!

Yes, three cheers for Gramp', and a deep, admiring kowtow for Mr. "Chic" Sales who so memorably portrays the shrewd and dauntless veteran from the Old Soldiers' Home!

It's this way, you see:

Gramp' gets forty-eight hours leave from the home and comes to visit his married daughter and her family. AND—there's a shooting in the street right in front of the Leeds' abode. The quiet lives of the Leedses are, without warning, whirled hither and thither in a maelstrom of police investigation and gangster menace. And—well, see the rest for yourselves.

"The Star Witness" is hokumy, but it carries a punch, a thought, and an arraignment of the citizen who wants protection for his home, but is too white livered to take a stand with those who would protect it.

Walter Huston is splendid as the District Attorney. Frances Starr is a lovely and convincing mother. Other rôles are uniformly well played. You'll adore the two youngsters in the piece.

"The Star Witness" IS another gangster picture. But with a difference. And "Chic" Sales is the difference.

Ice Fund Money Comes from Fines Before Judge Heller

Right when the ice fund appeared to be at a standstill, and the need of the delivery of ice to tenement homes was increasing with every mounting degree of the thermometer yesterday, came a generous gift from a member of Chicago's judiciary.

The gift was dispatched through Bailiff Clem Graver from Judge Samuel Heller, who is sitting in the West Chicago avenue court. It was $100 in currency and represented that amount in fines imposed by the judge.

THE STAGE

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

MAUDE ADAMS' return to the stage has been promised and postponed many times during the last two years. Now, from a Broadway source that the New York Times regards as "unimpeachable," comes a report that the favorite actress of the last generation, who has been in retirement since 1918, will appear with Otis Skinner in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice." She will be the Portia and Mr. Skinner the Shylock.

John D. Williams, manager of Miss Adams' tours when she was under the direction of Charles Frohman, is staging the production. The other members of the cast are now being selected, and rehearsals will begin Oct. 5. The play will open "out of town," as they say on Broadway, and will tour the south and west during the winter under the auspices of the Erlanger firm. It is understood that the bookings were arranged to meet Miss Adams' request for a winter in the mild climate of the southern states.

Miss Adams was a star for twenty-one years before her retirement and she held a unique position in the affection of playgoers all over the country. The brilliant phase of her career began with Barrie's "The Little Minister," staged in 1897. She became Barrie's favorite American actress and had first call on his plays. "Peter Pan," "What Every Woman Knows," and "A Kiss for Cinderella" were other Barrie plays in which she had notable successes.

Other rôles in her history were the title characters in Rostand's "L'Aiglon" and "Chantecler." In the former she appeared as Napoleon's ill-fated son, acted in Paris by Sarah Bernhardt; in the latter she appeared as the Gallic rooster, hero of a barnyard allegory.

Last year it was announced that Miss Adams would return to the stage in a drama by John Colton called "That's the Way With Them," but the project was abandoned. She has acted a number of Shakespearean rôles, but this will be her first interpretation of Portia. On the other hand, Otis Skinner has played Shylock in several productions.

France Confers Cross on U. S. War Chief

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

REIMS, Sept. 16.—On a flowering hillside that was once a battlefield, a few miles north of Rheims, and in the presence of a regiment of infantry, André Maginot, French minister of war, pinned the cross of a grand officer of the Legion of Honor on the tunic of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States army, today. Maginot then delivered the traditional accolade, kissing him on both cheeks. Gen. MacArthur accepted without flinching.

This ceremony was the high light of a great military review in honor of Gen. MacArthur and other foreign soldiers.

Illinois Sands May Help Glass, Steel Buildings

Artists, Scientists to Discuss Problem Tonight.

Glass and steel buildings will be discussed tonight. A group of artists, architects, and scientists will meet at the Fort Dearborn grill to discuss possibilities of manufacturing glass from the glacial silt which is deposited in Illinois. The meeting is sponsored by the Artists' guild.

Thomas O'Shaughnessy, a member of the municipal art commission, will address the meeting. Illinois sands outrival those from which the fine glassware of the Phoenicians was made, according to Mr. O'Shaughnessy. "American engineers have come to recognize the glacial silt of Illinois as being most free from foreign matter and of the crystal character that builds the best glass fabric," said Mr. O'Shaughnessy.

The houses and skyscrapers of the future, which architects say will be constructed of glass and steel, are cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter than present day structures, Mr. O'Shaughnessy asserted. "It's the same principle as the thermos bottle," he said.

Glass from the Illinois silt will be utilized for everything from tableware to the roofs of buildings, supporters of the plans have declared. The conference tonight was suggested by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Lutheran Editors Pick Old Officers Again; Meeting Again Today

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Officers were reelected by the National Lutheran Editors' association, representing 2,000,000 members of that faith in the United States, gathered for a three day conclave today. They are: President, Dr. L. G. Abrahamson; vice president, Dr. N. R. Melhorn, Philadelphia; secretary, the Rev. Edward W. Schramm, Columbus, O.

Dr. R. A. S. Malmin of Minneapolis, associate editor of the Lutheran Herald, official organ of the Norwegian Lutheran chuch of America, advocated changing of the title of heads of Lutheran church groups in America from president to bishop. He declared those officers are entitled to respect which the latter title carried.

Dr. Melhorn, speaking of a possible union of Protestant churches, declared the time is not ripe for it, because of the vast differences in the members' temperaments and their natural objections to having only one form of ritual.

U. OF ILL. PRESIDENT CITES DEPRESSION AS SPUR OF STUDENTS

Urbana, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—President Harry Woodburn Chase welcomed about 3,700 freshmen to the University of Illinois today.

Faculty members and upper classmen will act as advisers during the next five days. On Friday and Saturday the freshmen will register as will students of the graduate schools. The other under graduates will register Monday and Tuesday with classes starting next Wednesday morning.

Dr. Chase told the new students today:

"You are privileged people at a time when being in college for a good many of you involves real sacrifices on the part of your parents and if ever any college generation should take education seriously it ought to be this generation.

"You come here to learn how to be mature people and you are going to learn it only as you learn how to stand on your own feet and develop yourselves intellectually, morally, and emotionally.

"Remember you are concerned and the university is concerned with your growing up. Intellectually, emotionally, and morally, the university gives you a chance to develop.

"The university wishes to give people a philosophy of life. It wishes to graduate students who can stand on their own feet when moral decisions are required. Through the spirit of the campus, the competition in athletics, and activities and the relationships of the entire student body in its social life, the university offers every freshman the opportunity to mature morally."

Swedish Prince and Commoner May Wed Secretly, It's Rumored

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 17.—Prince Lennart, grandson of King Gustav, still intends to marry Miss Karin Nissvandt. Both spent the summer in Germany and have now returned to Sweden. They are visiting at Castle Sten Hammar, which belongs to Prince Lennart's father, Prince Wilhelm.

The prince has rented a modern three-room apartment in Stockholm into which he will move on Oct. 1. It is presumed that he is going to give the world a surprise by announcing a secret marriage.

Princess Maria Paviova, mother of Prince Lennart, saw her son in Leipzig. She said afterwards: "Even if the prince marries with a bourgeoisie family and loses his inheritance from the Swedish state he will still be fairly affluent, as he inherited a large sum from the late Queen Victoria and sooner or later will receive a further inheritance and become a millionaire."

English Bishop Starts Divorce Clash at Denver

Attacks Modernist Views Before Episcopalians.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Controversy on divorce and remarriage was tossed into the 50th general convention of the Episcopal church at the opening session here today.

Until the convention preacher, the Rt. Rev. Michael Bolton Furse, lord bishop of St. Alban's, England, entered the convention pulpit to utter the keynote of this meeting, the bishops and the deputies, while looking for a conservative pronouncement from the convention, did not look for a controversial outbreak.

The British prelate, however, inveighed against any move for liberalizing the church ruling on divorce and remarriage and declared that "any group within the church that proposes or advocates the recognition of divorce at all is insincere! A reaction became apparent throughout the congregation of 10,000 people attending the service. Churchmen of all schools, high, low and broad, at the close of the sermon, spoke freely of the "poor taste" of the guest preacher.

Deputies pointed to the work of the commission on divorce and remarriage during the last three years. They declared that, although they might not favor the report, yet the effort to prejudice legislation represented unfortunate judgment on the part of the preacher as well as his advisers.

Bishop Furse linked the liberalizing church tendency with Russian influence. He declared the primary objective of the soviets' attack are the home and the Christian ideal of marriage. Such, he pointed out, is the basis of the Russian program to outlaw religion and worship.

"We may well look with horror on the anti-God campaign in Russia," said Bishop Furse, "but what is happening in Europe and America? To those who are convinced that Christian marriage is God's law for man the alarming increase in the number of divorces and of the causes for divorce are sinister enough; but far more sinister is the attitude toward this sorry business adopted by many individuals who profess the faith of Christ, and, alas, even officially by some Christian communions, an attitude of practical indifference, or even of acquiescence and condonation."

Even conservative delegates now assert that the proposals of the commission on the study of divorce may expect a more friendly hearing. The commission's report proposes the establishment of church courts within each diocese to rule on the possibility of remarriage of divorced persons who make such appeals. The Rev. Ralph Hayden, a deputy from Maine, and known as a conservative, declared the British prelate's absolute position rules out any consideration of "the ethics of annulment." He pointed out that marriages are sometimes solemnized illegally, and added that a pronouncement to provide for such cases should be made by the church.

Definite stand against any legislation effecting birth control also was voiced in the sermon. He declared:

"The prevalent and increasing use of contraceptives by married folk is, I am convinced, bound in the long run to degrade the holy state of matrimony, physically, intellectually, morally and spiritually; but it is doing more than that; it is giving a cloak of apparent respectability to the widespread use of these things among the unmarried, and thereby the standard of sexual morality is being lowered.

"The advocates of so-called companionate marriages know well enough that without the use of contraceptives their theory and practice would break down."

Convention politics began to buzz today in talk concerning election of a presiding bishop. The names of the incumbent, Bishop Perry of Rhode Island; Bishop Ernest M. Stires of Long Island, and Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington were mentioned. The house of bishops will make the selection the latter part of the week, and the choice will be referred to the house of delegates for ratification.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic today conquered sweltering heat and the ravages of old age to parade triumphantly in the 65th grand review of their organization.

A crowd of 60,000 persons greeted the 1,800 civil war veterans more with reverence than with cheers.

Scarcely more than 800, those to whom time had been kindest, were afoot. A thousand more were in automobiles. Des Moines remembered that when the encampment was here in 1926 there were 4,000 veterans in the review and in 1900 there were 8,000.

Although today was the hottest late summer day in this city's history, only two veterans fell out—J. P. D. Mouriquand, 85 years old, of Homestead, Okla. He gave up just a block from the reviewing stand. The other was E. K. Kinney of the 26th Illinois infantry. They recovered without medical attention.

The six divisions were headed by the United States army band. Proudly in the van of the marching veterans was David W. Nocton of Minneapolis, who sat as straight as the young cavalrymen from Fort Des Moines on his horse despite his 90 years. He was the only mounted veteran.

At the annual convention of the National Woman's Relief corps today, Mrs. Mary S. Jewel of Fort Morgan, Colo., was unanimously elected senior vice president. Edna E. Pauley of Indianapolis was named treasurer, defeating Josie C. Bennett of Harvard, Neb., treasurer for the last five years. Other officers will be chosen tomorrow. Mrs. Annie Poole Atwood of Wollaston, Mass., yesterday was elected national president.

Chicago Business Women to Meet Saturday, Sept. 26

Various and sundry important cogs in the machinery of big business in Chicago will gather around the luncheon tables in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman on Saturday, Sept. 26, yet the motif will be almost exclusively feminine. For Mayor Cermak and Samuel Insull Jr., as participants in the program, are the only men invited to break bread with the Federal Council of Professional and Business Women as they make plans to help their less lucky sisterhood through the winter months.

Last fall the federated council was organized, comprising most of the clubs of business and professional women of the city, to focus their efforts in caring for their colleagues who, through no fault of their own, found themselves jobless and penniless. To raise funds for such work the council staged the largest card party benefit ever held in the city. The proceeds were used in aiding nearly 6,000 women who since last March have passed through the emergency relief headquarters maintained in the Marquette building.

The "Friendship" luncheon to be held on the 26th will mark the announcement to the membership of the officers' plans for financing the work this winter. Feminine speakers will be Mrs. Ora Snyder, Judge Mary Bartelme, Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, and Miss Helen Bennett.

'Fads or Facts,' School Debate Is Costly, Too

But Junior Highs Are Pupils' Delight.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

At a time when taxpayers are looking for some relief from the burden of public school expenditures the schools are found to be in a state of educational flux demanding bigger and better experiments in the way of turning out competent, thinking young citizens. Change and a new testing are in the air.

Is it plant expenditure? Well, investigate the building department and save a lot of money, they say. But they must have new buildings. Is it the pay of teachers, which takes about 75 per cent of the current funds? The report of the Cleveland Audit company recommending suspension of automatic increases in salary amounting to $607,000 a year has met with bitter resentment and no action. The trend of the times is for more highly paid, specialized professional teachers.

As to the outcry against "frills and fancies," this is met with tolerant amusement in educational circles. There it is pointed out that no two critics can agree on what constitutes the nonessentials in the school program. In the meantime our young leisure class goes blithely on enjoying clubs and excursions, swimming pools, music rooms, or turns into a shop where a way of earning a living may be learned.

"Dear Louise—Just think, five more months and you will come over to junior high. I know you will love it. We change rooms every fifty minutes and have a different teacher for every subject. We have the privilege of choosing a new club every semester. I am in the sewing club now and have just finished making a beautiful purse. . . . Our building is magnificent. We have a beautiful assembly hall, science rooms and music rooms, and best of all, a large swimming pool. We also have a splendid cafeteria. We have so many opportunities and advantages I could never get through talking about them. JOSEPHINE M."

"Dear John—When I left the elementary school I came to junior high, and I am very glad I did. We have a magnificent building here, containing two large gymnasiums, fully equipped, a beautiful assembly hall with a balcony, and a very attractive lunch room with marble topped tables where the food is delicious and very reasonable in price. One of the nice things we have is swimming once a week in our tiled pool. Another nice thing is our shop work. There are five shops for boys: pottery, tin, electric, wood, and print. We even have a school paper. Twice a week we go to our hobby clubs. I joined the boys' glee club. There are many other interesting things, including lockers, movies, concerts, band, orchestra, and foreign language. JACK F."

The hobby clubs referred to include aeroplane, astronomy, basketry, boxing, camp cooking, dog, dramatics, embroidery, folk dancing, hiking, knitting, metal etching, millinery, new inventions, newspaper, orchestra, poultry, radio, scrap book, tennis, travel, violin, wild flower.

The vocational plants, in which such great sums are spent for teaching and equipment, are regarded with some doubt in university circles. There the criticism is made that they are largely "make believe," that they merely offer soft courses for the boys instead of hard ones, and that they are unrelated to life.

These theorists may not know what they are talking about, for Charles A. Unnwehr, principal of the South Side Continuation school, reports as follows:

"During the present extended and rather serious industrial depression, when in one of our trades about 70 per cent of experienced journeymen are out of work, only 10 per cent of our graduate journeymen are idle. In another group in which employment is now 50 per cent normal there is not a single apprentice out of work, and only two of our graduate students are idle.

"In our nine departments the unemployed among those not having attended our school is much greater than that among those who did. There is growing coöperation of unions and employer organizations with the school. Equipment worth $20,000 was given to the steamfitting department by employers and equipment worth $60,000 to the pressman department. A castings furnace, steam piping, radiators, oil burners, refrigerator units, metal lathing, and wallpaper are among the gifts.

"This popularizes the conviction that public money may and should be spent for the training of those in the shops as well as those in the office. It is removing the prejudice against manual labor. More and more high school boys are entering the trades, which are beginning to be a profession.

"At present we are serving electricians, carpenters, machinists, painters, decorators, sheet metal workers, steamfitters, metal lathers, sign painters, and pressmen. New demands for training are coming in. The plasterers, foundry men, pattern makers, barbers, meat cutters, and welders are making overtures for admission to the school. In every school there is a long waiting list of oxyacetylene welding. There are machinists, metal lathers, architectural iron workers, and electricians who are studying television, vitaphone, telephone, and advanced radio work. Our expansion has already absorbed three portables and four rooms in the Foster school. A new and larger building is inevitable."

Playing With Fire

By WILLIAM MAC LEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Lee Reynolds is the owner of a ranch which drought has almost ruined. She leases a Mexican rancho and moves her starving herd there. She is barely settled when a revolution breaks out. Megares, bogey man of the border, is the leader. Ranse Brennan, a former foreman of Lee's, is his right hand man. Brennan was discharged by Lee and swore revenge. Lee hires a new hand, who is recognized by Dune Daggett, an old ranch helper, as Jack Hadley, a millionaire oil man of California, whose father owned a mine near Lee's ranch and was murdered by outlaws. Hadley is searching for the murderer of his father. Hadley and Lee call on Megares, who is, apparently, friendly to them. Megares calls at the ranch and is infatuated with Lee's guest, Mrs. Doris Silver. He comes to live at the rancho, to protect them, he says, though they are really his prisoners. Doris is rescued by airplane by her husband. Lee refuses to leave her ranchers—and Jack Hadley, whom she loves. Harold Silver promises to return with an armed plane for their rescue. Lee and Jack are sentenced by a drum court martial to be shot at sunset. Brennan is shot by Megares when he tries to interfere in Lee's behalf.

INSTALLMENT XXVIII.

ONE OF THOSE SLIGHT ERRORS.

Jack looked out of the window and saw the sun sinking into a crotch of the jagged hills. His heart was leaden. He could count the remaining span of his life by minutes. It was such a cursed ironic tragedy, to have found the one woman he wanted and to lose her merely to satisfy the malice of a savage. Such frustration was so useless.

He was to be wiped out and his lover's fine pride dragged in the dust to sate the urge of a murderer's whims. There was no reason in it. No logic in it. Yet it was an inexorable fact. All the lusty life in him resented it.

The voices of the men moving to and fro outside came to him. A horse nickered. Ysela went to the well with a bucket, drew water, and returned with it . . . . All the homely little details of existence would go on as usual. But he would not be here to see and share in them.

It was going to be a ghastly business for Lee. To let his mind travel along that road was torture. When Megares had finished with her she would be a degraded and a beaten creature. If she went on it would be as a poor pitiful soul shorn of all hopefulness. All the splendor that gave a lilt to her voice and music to her walk would be blotted out. He ached with his pity for her.

The sound of shots shattered the quiet, the crash of revolvers pumping bullets fast and furious. His pulses quickened with apprehension. He walked to the door and beat upon it, demanding to know what was wrong.

Nobody paid any attention to him. Excited voices were raised. Men raced along the passage, rushed up and down the stairs, called to one another. Some one, he gathered, had been killed. A man. A gringo. Presently he could hear the shuffling of feet and the giving of orders. They were carrying out the body. Whose? Had old Dune Daggett flung away caution and attempted to do something foolish for Lee? Had he paid the penalty of his rashness? If so, what effect would it have on Lee's fate?

Guards came into the room and tied his hands behind him.

"I am to see the señorita?" he asked.

"Yes," the corporal said. "For ten minutes. No more."

The guards led him along the corridor, opened the door of a room, pushed him inside, and closed it.

"Don't surrender. Fight as long as you can against him."

She stretched her arms toward him and he moved forward. Her hands caught and clung to him above the elbows, and even as she kissed him she broke into sobs.

"Who—Megares?"

"Yes. Ranse stood up for me. They quarreled. He shot Ranse to death . . . . But he has promised me to let you go."

He did not believe it. Yet his heart leaped, as though it were something in him not a part of him.

"He promised me. Does he mean it, Jack? Ranse told him he was lying to me, that—that——"

"Probably he doesn't mean it. He's vindictive and full of tricks. Have you a pair of scissors? Can you cut the cord around my wrists?"

"No. Not here."

She sawed through the cords. He took her in his arms and held her close.

"Has he told you what he means to do with you?"

She hesitated. "Yes," she said at last in a small voice.

He did not ask her what it was. He did not need to ask her. They held each other tightly, as though by physical closeness they could escape the fates appointed for them.

"Why is he going to let me go? I mean, why did he say he was?"

"I begged your life of him. He said you might have it and that I could meet you this once to say goodby."

"Don't surrender. Fight as long as you can against him. Brennan was right. He isn't going to let me go. It's a trap for you."

"But he promised me," she insisted. "He said I could watch you go. He said the sooner you went the better it suited him. Maybe he'll let you go. Why shouldn't he? You haven't done him any harm."

"He thinks I planned it to get Doris away. His vanity demands revenge. But that isn't all. He knows I know he murdered my father. He's not going to lose this chance to wipe the slate clean. No. He's lying to you. It's just the sort of thing that would please him—to get rid of me quietly and let you find it out later, after he didn't care whether you knew or not."

"Can he be as dreadful as that," she cried. "It doesn't seem possible."

"Evade him. Use all your wits. Play for time. Perhaps you'll get a break. His promise means nothing. I can see that now . . . . . clearly. It was given only to drive you to him."

"But if he meant it, dearest, if——"

"He didn't. Don't fool yourself. He's full of lies. He never meant for a moment to let me go."

She broke down. "I can't bear it. You're the only man I've ever loved. It's so terrible. I get to thinking it must be a dream. What are we to do, Jack?"

A knock sounded. It struck on their hearts like the toll of a knell. Their time was up. They had come to get him.

Megares walked in, the embodiment of suave and sinister malice.

"Enter the villain," he said, and showed his teeth in a smile one might have mistaken for benevolence.

"But events have crowded so, chiquita. Alas, the course of true love never did run smooth."

"You've promised me his life," Lee reminded the Mexican wildly.

"Yes. As a special favor to you, heart of my heart. He shall ride north, out of our lives. And we, in the joy of our honeymoon, will forget him and his crimes. We will even hope that he may live to repent of them. The king is dead. Long live the king. When I say dead you will understand, Mr. Hadley, that I mean metaphorically speaking."

"I understand you," Jack said quietly.

The bandit's black eyes mocked him. "Indeed! When you meet Mrs. Silver will you give her my best regards—I should say our best regards, little one—and tell her how through her abrupt departure the blue bird of happiness came to sing its song to two loving hearts."

"I am free?" Jack asked bluntly.

"I may leave here whenever I please?"

"We shall be sorry to see you go," Megares murmured politely.

Strapped to Megares' side were two revolvers. Hadley was unarmed. The Mexican shrugged his shoulders.

"I had forgotten to dismiss them."

He strolled to the door, opened it, and gave the men outside a curt command.

"You have far from a trusting disposition, Mr. Hadley," he reproached.

"So I am free," Jack said. "I wonder."

"Free as the air. In fact, though I do not want to seem inhospitable, Miss Reynolds and I are ready to hear the word adios from you."

"D'you think I'll be a party to your damnable bargain?"

"Not at all. You are an outsider." Megares turned to Lee. "We have our understanding, have we not?"

"No," Jack denied. "I'll not have it."

He watched Megares closely. The man was enjoying himself immensely. The feline side of him, which found delight in playing with its victims, was to the fore. He was growing a little careless. Presently, if something did not drag him back from the mood on which he was floating, perhaps . . . . .

Not once did Jack's gaze shift from him. Megares knew it and was pleased. He did not quite read the thought in his prisoner's mind. He guessed it to be chaotic hate and jealousy and fear. This was as it should be. Let the gringo suffer.

Invalid's Want Radio.

"We are five patients on a porch at a tuberculosis sanitarium. Some of us have been here a year and all of us expect to spend the winter here and we hate the thought of facing it without a radio set. We cannot afford to buy one and we cannot keep a battery set operating, as the batteries cost too much. If some one would help us to get a set we would be most thankful. E. J."

If you are planning to invest in a new radio set, perhaps your old one could be put in working condition for these invalids. Lying in bed would not be such a hardship if they had the entertainment of a radio set to keep them occupied.

Artificial Arm.

"I have an artificial arm in fine condition which I should like to give to some one. It could be used by some one whose right arm has been amputated above the elbow. It was an expensive one and the fingers and wrist may be moved into different positions. "MRS. R. J."

Can you make use of this artificial arm? If so, write me for it; please do not telephone.

Hoover Lauds U. S. Basic Law, Key to Liberty

"The constitution of the United States is the charter of our government, the foundation of our institutions, and the bulwark of our liberties. Organizations which promote allegiance to it serve the nation."

Such was the message signed by President Hoover and sent to the Constitution Educational association headquarters here preliminary to the observance today of the 144th anniversary of the completion and the signing of the national constitution.

Illinois is one of sixteen states in which the governors called on their citizenry to study today the constitution, to read again the story of its creation, and for schools, churches, patriotic groups and civic organizations to observe the anniversary.

Gov. Emmerson in his proclamation called on "the churches and schools and fraternal organizations to coöperate in reviving individual and community interest in our nation's basic law to the end that there shall be a more general appreciation of the influence which gave it birth, of its durability and adaptability, of its effect upon the forward strivings of the human race, and of its guarantees for both present and future generations."

It is in Pennsylvania that today has special significance. For the birthplace of the constitution was in that state. Gov. Gifford Pinchot in his proclamation said that the birthday of the "immortal document" should be observed by a constructive study of it, especially in the higher grades in school.

In Chicago several programs have been arranged for today. Former Ald. Charles Scribner Eaton will address the Logan Square Lions club at a luncheon, and at the Lake View Lions club Noble W. Lee will speak. The Independent German-American Woman's club will have a Constitution day program this afternoon at the Copeland hotel. A number of radio addresses are scheduled for today, including an NBC broadcasting of proclamations at noon.

There Is Direct and Indirect Treatment of Childish Fears

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

A letter contains the following:

"Lately our eldest little boy has developed a restlessness after he has gone to bed and he often lies awake until 10 o'clock or after worrying for fear he will be left alone in the house. We never leave the children alone (there are two little ones) and never have. We do go out quite a bit evenings, and, as we always tell Tommy when and where we are going, he has never seemed to mind a bit.

"I have a maid who lives here and is always in the house when we go. She has been with us for over two years and I'm sure she is to be trusted absolutely and the children like her ever so much. I have questioned Tom and found that once during the spring when we were out he awoke late at night—11 o'clock or so, I judge—and called and no one came. My maid is a rather heavy sleeper and I haven't a doubt that if it happened after a day of hard work for her that she was simply too sound asleep to be awakened.

"I can see how that would cause a panic in Tommy's breast, poor little fellow. And, using that for the only basis of fear I can find, I've done all I can think of to give him assurance that he won't be left alone. Now he seems to be fairly easy about Anna staying at home when we go out, but he seems to worry more than ever when my husband and I are spending the evening at home alone or together. He often tosses and frets until he hears us come to bed. Then he goes to sleep at once."

Many children who have had the experience of waking up and finding themselves alone or thinking themselves alone are terrified for months afterward. It seems to be difficult to eradicate the fear so aroused. Many parents have had this experience. These particular parents have used every reassurance within their power without success. For direct handling of the fear I have no further suggestions to make than those means they have used.

As far as direct handling of the fear is concerned, I shall be glad if any mother will contribute the fruit of an experience of her own method which has shown results. I shall be happy to print anything specific that seems logical and successful, because it is sometimes necessary to try first one device, then another.

But, as for an indirect erasing of the symptoms of fear, there is one suggestion that is worth consideration.

This mother has two other quite little children—a time and attention absorbing proposition. Appearing suddenly on the landscape when you were 2½, they might well usurp a great deal of the father and mother you had formerly had exclusive possession of. Still, you loved the baby brother and sister, and there was probably nothing you could do about it. But once you noticed something—that time you were frightened or after, when you tossed and turned and couldn't go to sleep at night you found your father and mother much concerned. They came in and sat with you and fussed over you. That was a satisfaction, and quite unconsciously you kept it up. Here is a picture—it may depict a cause, it may not.

With the suggestions contained in yesterday's article and today's we offer what we hope is helpful advice.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

[Registered U. S. Patent Office.]

WOMAN'S OR MISS' DRESS.

Here is one of the season's smartest new designs—and is just the thing for street wear. The wrapped skirt closes at the left side front and has a smart fitting hip yoke, button trimmed. The one sided collar is a slenderizing detail, and the softly falling jabot frill also contributes to that effect. A plaided sheer woolen with a matching plain shade for contrast is suggested.

The pattern, 3018, comes in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅛ yard of 27 inch contrasting.

Father and Daughter Students in Same College

Jacksonville, Ill., Sept. 16. — [Special.]—Today marked the one hundred and second anniversary of the opening of Illinois college. President C. H. Rammelkamp announced the college had recived a charter for the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity, the honorary scholastic society.

Fletcher McDonald, who resides near Vandalia, after an absence of twenty years, has matriculated as a senior; his daughter is a sophomore. He has a son in the local high school.

Graying Hair May Be Expertly Dyed to Give Natural Effect

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

In this business of changing the shade of hair more extremists are at large at the moment than are evidenced in other phases of mechanical beauty aiding.

Blonds are extraordinarily blond and extraordinarily abundant. In this group you find many extremists. They go too startlingly blond for eye comfort. [That is, your eye and mine—not the blond's.] I suppose the reason is that each time they get a rinse or bleach or dye, their appetite is sharpened for a brighter shade. The eye becomes a bit jaded and calls for stronger bleaching lotions—as the nose acts with perfume usage. The sense involved becomes a little dulled.

And reds come next in going to extremes. If anything, they are worse, because the dyed red result is worse than a blond result. It's apt to shy off into orange pinks and grotesque shades that could never be classified as Titian or auburn.

The black dyed hair, while it may be devastatingly hardening, still has the advantage of not turning out a color riot. Of course, I'm speaking here of poor dyeing jobs, because expert work provides against these terrible color disharmonies.

I saw one of the cleverest hair dyeing jobs the other day. It might be copied by women who hate the white hairs, but hate more the artificial looking head. The woman had light brown hair originally. Instead of having the entire head dyed a uniform brown, the hair was treated so that the parts around the face looked a natural but not too young brown. The hair throughout the entire head carried out the same idea.

There was not an attempt to make the hair look a false young color; rather it was a young looking and slightly graying head. The woman who does this work has the mischief of a job convincing clients that the system of partial dyeing, let's call it, is better with the older face than a complete change of color. Yet it is logical that it would turn out so.

100 YEARS OLD TODAY, CITES PIONEER LIFE TO TODAY'S PESSIMISTS

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary McFarren will celebrate the 100th anniversary of her birth tomorrow at her home in Oregon, Ill. She was born in Pennsylvania and traveled with her parents in a covered wagon to Arkansas and Kansas. She says today the present depression seems like prosperity when compared with the hardships of pioneer life.

Two Winnetka Weddings on Today's List

BY THALIA——

PRACTICALLY everybody will be bound for Winnetka shortly after luncheon today to attend two of the prettiest weddings of the fall. At 4 o'clock Miss Marguerite Watson, daughter of Hathway Watson and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, will be married to Walter Field McLallen Jr., and at 5 o'clock there will be the wedding of Miss Leslie Thorne, to Charles H. Thornes' daughter, to Dewey Dockwood Pierce of New York City.

Miss Watson and Mr. McLallen's wedding will take place in Christ church, and after the ceremony a large reception will be held in the gardens of Meadowreach, the Winnetka residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf. The groom's sister, Miss Helen McLallen, will attend Miss Watson as maid of honor, and the ten bridesmaids, all of whom "came out" last winter with the bride, will include Caroline Smith, Elsa Armour, Beatrice Kirk, Hortense Henry, Josephine Dunphy, Constance Hasler, Suzette Horton, Fayette Smith, and Ruth Gossett. Helen Stanley was to have been in the wedding party, but was unable to return from her parents' summer estate in Desbarats in time for the occasion.

Willard Thorne will be Mr. McLallen's best man, and the list of ushers, to which some last minute changes are to be made, includes Press Hodgkins, John Erskine, George Chapell Jr., Frank Wood Jr., Solomon B. Smith, Prince Nicholas Galitzine, Gardner Brown, Walter Hellyer and Walter and Hathaway Watson Jr.

Details of Miss Thorne's Plans for Wedding Today.

The wedding of Miss Thorne and Mr. Pierce will be solemnized at the residence of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett W. Thorne, on Indian Hill road. Both the nuptial service and the reception to follow will be held in the gardens.

Miss Thorne's matron of honor will be her sister, Mrs. Robert H. Andrews, and her bridesmaids will be Mrs. Hallett Thorne, Miss Dorothy Neff of Kenosha, Miss Eloise Requa, and the groom's sister, Mrs. Gertrude Pierce Thomas of California.

Joseph A. MacDonald of New York will be best man for Mr. Pierce and the ushers will include Hallet Thorne, Robert Andrews, Clarke Miller of Pittsburgh, James Coffey of New York and Chicago, and William Koch and Leonard Lyones of New York.

ENGAGED

[Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ericsson of 534 Surf street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Hazel, to Dr. Frank Victor Theis, son of Dr. and Mrs. Victor Theis of 632 Belden avenue.

Mrs. H. H. Kohlsaat, who has been residing in Rome these last few years, was in Chicago yesterday, but apparently she didn't tarry long, or else she is visiting some one. She was registered at the Drake in the morning and a few hours later she checked out again. It's likely that she was on her way either to or from Minneapolis and a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Roger Shepard. She is to be present at the wedding of her granddaughter, Miss Bertha Palmer, and Oakleigh Thorne Lewis at Hare Forest, the Potter Palmer place at Bar Harbor, on Sept. 28.

Tribune Early Chicago Feature Is Turned Into Drama.

Miss Alice Gerstenberg and Miss Herma Clark have been busy this summer collaborating on a most interesting play, and have just completed it. It's based on the same sort of historical material that Miss Clark writes about in her column, "When Chicago Was Young," which appears in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. It has the same title. The hero and heroine are fictitious characters, but Lincoln, Stephen A. Douglas, some of the Chicago pioneers and various personages of interest in the city's history are represented. The play has three acts, a prologue and epilogue.

Various dramatic events in the city's development, including, I believe, the fire and the world's fair, are included in the action, through which the plot is woven. The play's numerous scenes and the period costumes required will make it a most colorful production.

Several Yale Students Among Chicago Youths.

The Winnetka board of the Northwestern university settlement is to sponsor a tea and fashion show on Monday, Oct. 19, at 2:30 o'clock, at the Winnetka Masonic temple. Mrs. Charles Strong is chairman of the benefit, and assisting will be Mrs. Mark Cresap, Mrs. Godfrey Atkin, Mrs. Hugh Foresman, Mrs. Warren Lamson, Mrs. Pierce Ward, Mrs. Bruce MacLeish, Mrs. Donald Defrees, Mrs. Leslie Cooke, Mrs. Frank Payne, Mrs. Chester Sargent, Mrs. Oliver Knode, Mrs. Herbert Butz, Mrs. Henry Freyn, Mrs. Towner Webster, and Mrs. Richard Aishton. North shore debutantes are to model the clothes.

Jottings—Although rumors continue to fly thick and fast along the grapevine route about Yale postponing its opening for a month or more because of the infantile paralysis, none of the students has been notified officially of any postponement. School is to open on Oct. 1 and the freshmen are to be there a day or two ahead of time. Aldis Browne Jr. is to enter this season and will go to New Haven from Cape Cod, where he has been summering with his mother. . . . Mrs. Harry Shearson is sailing from Europe some time this week (on the same boat the Charles G. Cushings are returning to New York on), and will be in Chicago the latter part of the month. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Earle H. Reynolds have been up at the Island club at Lac du Flambeau for a few days' fishing.

WEDDING

The marriage of Miss Virginia Agar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Stearns Agar of 3750 Sheridan road, to George William Hust, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hust, was solemnized at 8 o'clock last night by the Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone at the Lake Shore Athletic club. A reception followed the ceremony.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown with a rose point lace veil and carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Her attendants included Mrs. John G. Latimer and Miss Lucille Goodwillie as matron and maid of honor.

Food Talk.

Chipper September mornings are stimulating. It seems infinitely easier now, than it was a month ago, to whisk a dust cloth about and romp merrily over the carpet with the vacuum. One feels strong as Samson and as cheerful as Pollyanna.

I have been having a grand spree in the kitchen beguiling some fat red and green peppers into pepper hash. You will remember I gave you the recipe, several weeks ago, for this relish. Did you say you had forgotten it? If you did, write for it, and then you can take full advantage of a bountiful pepper market.

Peppers are much kinder to housewives this season than corn proved itself to be. They are large, full shaped, with a beautiful rich red and green color. The finished pickle will serve as an excellent garnish for simple and fancy meals throughout the winter. And such a perfect contrast and complement for luncheon and dinner entrees!

Which reminds me, there is a letter here requesting a receipe for apple pickle. Apples are plentiful, too, and you might like to put up a few jars of these. They are good.

SWEET APPLE PICKLE.

1 pint [2 cups] of brown sugar.
1 pint of vinegar.
2 sticks of cinnamon.
1 teaspoon of whole cloves.
½ gallon of sweet apples.

Pare, core, and quarter the apples. Make a syrup of the sugar, vinegar, and spices. Cook the apples in the syrup until they are soft. Pack in hot sterile jars; cover with the syrup, and seal.

If you enjoy spaghetti, you will like the following recipe for tomorrow's luncheon dish. No matter if you can't eat it gracefully. You aren't the only one!

ITALIAN SPAGHETTI.

2 teaspoons of salt.
¼ cup of salad oil, or 2 tablespoons of butter.
2 medium sized onions.
3 tablespoons of chopped green pepper.
1 pint can of tomatoes [fresh cooked tomatoes may be substituted].
1 teaspoon of salt.
1 lump of loaf sugar.
Grated Parmesan, or strong American cheese.

Heat the oil or butter in a saucepan; add the onions (chopped) and the pepper. Cook until half tender and then add the tomatoes, salt, and loaf sugar. Cook slowly until the onions are done. Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and place in a heated dish. Stir about 2 ounces of grated cheese through it. Pour the hot sauce over it and serve at once. Yield: Six servings.

FILLETS OF WHITE FLESHED FISH.

Clean, wash, and dry fillets of fish. Grease a shallow baking dish well. Place the fillets in it, and bake in a very hot oven for five minutes [550 degrees Fahrenheit], remove from the oven, and cover with sour cream and bread crumbs. Bake until cream and crumbs are an attractive brown.

Plan Club Programs.

The conference of club presidents and program chairmen will meet at 10:15 o'clock this morning in Fullerton hall of the Art institute.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French returned on the Olympic. Mrs. Joshua S. Cosden returned on the same liner.

Mrs. Ernest Iselin gave a luncheon yesterday at the roof garden of the Hotel Pierre for Mrs. Eugene S. Reynal.

Mrs. George Dallas Yeomans, who passed the summer at Cherry Hill, Plymouth, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Hotel Carlyle for Mrs. Franklin E. Vilas.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Strawbridge Jr. are expected from Europe the latter part of this month. Mrs. Strawbridge was Miss Florence Loew.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Clarkson are passing the autumn at Callendar.

DR CALDWELL'S way helps any Child's Bowels

OFTEN, this simple prescription brings the first natural, complete bowel action a child has had in weeks. And the entire system benefits from its gentle aid!

Feverishness, biliousness, headaches simply disappear when Syrup Pepsin is used. The bowels become regular and remain that way. Appetite becomes hearty; the digestion becomes more complete; energy and strength are restored.

Nothing you can give a bilious, half-sick, constipated child—or take yourself when your bowels need help—will do as much for you.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription for the bowels, written by a famous physician—one whose record of over 3500 birth cases without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

No wonder Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is ideal for women and children. But it is equally effective for the bowels of robust men. Whether you're only occasionally constipated or chronically that way, it will cleanse, regulate your bowels, harmlessly and in a hurry. All drugstores have the big bottles.

ENVOY WITHOUT COUNTRY SLATED FOR SCRAP HEAP

France Yields to Russia on Georgian Legation.

BY EGBERT SWENSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 16.—What is probably the world's only diplomatic legation without a country is doomed to extinction after ten years of prond struggle against fate.

It is the legation of Georgia—the country which produced Joseph Stalin, successor to the sainted Lenin as dictator of soviet Russia. For ten years, ever since the Bolshevik invasion toppled over the three year old Georgian republic, the legation has functioned manfully in Paris, a large part of its business being in attending brilliant diplomatic functions, serving cheerfully as a social thorn in the side of the Bolshevik ambassador and providing plenty of worry for the master of ceremonies in keeping the fiery Georgian mountaineer legation officials at the greatest distance possible from the hated Moscow envoy and his aides.

France Yields to Red Demands.

And now France, which for ten years persisted in maintaining recognition of the tiny nonexistent mountain republic in the face of repeated demands from Moscow for its suppression, appears to have yielded. The French commission which is negotiating with the bolsheviks for a nonaggression pact has agreed to suppress the "legation de Georgie" and the brass plate, the correctly mannered, austere doorman, the minister, the first and second secretaries and all other functionaries.

The legation itself refuses, with characteristic pride, to admit even the possibility of extinction. The first secretary, S. Assathiany, revealed today that not only the legation—the minister's name is A. Tschenkeli—but also the heads of the government of the former Georgian republic in Paris. They are President Noe Jordania, E. Gueguetchkoie, minister of foreign affairs, and C. Kandelari, minister of finance. The ministers for war and education are still in Georgia, camouflaging their high positions in the nonexistent republic as well as they can.

Where They Get the Money.

Regarding the source of money to keep up the legation, Secretary Assathiany said:

"Georgian refugees were successful in bringing out enough money during the bolshevik invasion to keep up the legation for years to come."

He refuted insistent rumors that the angel is certain oil interests who have reasons of their own for wanting an independent government for the little country, in which Batum and its near by oil wells are situated.

"Furthermore we receive fees for handling diplomatic documents," declared Assathiany, signing a couple of impressive sheets brought in by a stenographer. "For instance, Georgians wishing to go to England or Italy use our passport. As for loyal Georgians wishing to go to the United States, which has not recognized us, we communicate with the American consulate, which gives our nationals special permits."

Tells of Hate for Reds.

The diplomat, proudly lifting his chin of bristling black whiskers, then remarked:

"We are always invited to all diplomatic functions. You ask what happens when we enter the same salon as a bolshevik ambassador? We do not speak. We are here," and he pointed, illustrating with his hands that the "bolsheviks are over there."

"Do you shake hands?" I asked.

"We would rather shoot them," he replied, illustrating with a significant gesture intimating a trigger in action.

TWO BANDITS ROB MICHIGAN BANK; LOOT IS $10,000

Mount Clemens, Mich., Sept. 16.—Two bandits this afternoon held up and robbed the First National bank, fired on a bank employé, kidnaped an assistant cashier, threw him from their car at the west edge of the city, and escaped. They obtained two packages of money, believed to have contained about $10,000.

The holdup occurred when the lobby was clear. A. P. Grim, president, Morton Rosso, assistant cashier, and Eldon Valentine, a bookkeeper, were the only persons in the bank.

Valentine was standing at the counter near the bank vault when the bandits entered and ordered the trio to throw up their hands. As Valentine attempted to step through the door to give a warning the bandits fired two shots at him. Both struck the open door of the vault.

The bandits ordered Rosso into the vault and told him to give them all the money in the place. He handed them two packages, about $10,000.

LISBON REVOLT SCARE TURNS OUT TO BE A FLIVVER

LISBON, Portugal, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Troops were called out, artillery was hurried into position, cordons of soldiers were thrown about government buildings, and the city waited tensely for a revolution which did not materialize last night.

A telephone line between here and Braga, where an army division is garrisoned, was cut in the night and the government, which has lived in fear of revolt for some time, concluded that this meant that rebellion had begun and that the troops at Braga were on the way to attack.

At 6 o'clock this morning the telephone line was repaired and the capital learned that the Braga division had gone to bed at 9 o'clock and was still asleep. A motor truck had smashed into a telephone pole and broken the telephone communication.

If you want a lot for your money—here are the tires for your truck. Goodyear Pathfinders—as big, as husky as any tire at any price—with the long life and extra comeback of Goodyear Supertwist cord beneath its road-gripping tread.

No motorist need take a chance on unknown or off-brand tires for economy's sake.

Despite the fact that these prices are record-breakingly low you get a tire that is outstanding in performance and durability.

You get a great sturdy tough-treaded Supertwist balloon — handsome and massive and long-wearing and trouble-free—a tire that is Goodyear calibre through and through.

CUBS WIN TWO FROM BRAVES, 6-5 AND 8-7

MAROONS ARE WILLING, BUT TEAM'S WEAK

Powerful Foes Jam Grid Schedule.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

There is none, not even the most optimistic alumnus, who would predict a victorious football season for the 1931 University of Chicago eleven if success is measured only by the won and lost columns. But measured by effectiveness in ratio to available material the Maroons should achieve success this fall.

SAM ROBWITZ.

The squad which yesterday went through a second day of double practice sessions faces a task which might alarm a team blessed with greater natural physical ability. Michigan and Purdue, two of three Big Ten teams which are title favorites, are on the schedule. And Yale, alma mater of Coach A. A. Stagg, in whose honor the Bulldog makes its first western invasion on Oct. 17, promises to be one of the ranking eastern elevens.

Indiana, which also is counted highly dangerous this fall because of sophomore material and returning veterans, Illinois, and Wisconsin complete the conference opposition.

Reserve Strength Weak.

Chicago's greatest weakness this fall will be lack of reserve strength. Stagg will be able to select a first eleven of average ability. His back field will carry a greater threat than in recent years.

One end and one tackle must be found. The other five line positions already are allocated to returning veterans, not all of whom are letter men, however, and none of whom is a great player. On the line depends largely the ground gaining opportunities for a back field of one senior, Quarter Back Paul Stagg, and three sophomore backs, Vince Sahlin, Pat Page Jr., and Pete Zimmer.

This is not a cheerful picture. But Coach Stagg is not pessimistic. Perhaps he has seen too many teams in his four decades of active service on the Midway to make any one team the overwhelming center of his life. And by nature Stagg does not overemphasize the value of victory.

Veteran and rookie alike, the line will have a preseason drill which will produce football players or kill them in the process. Pat Page, returning to Midway football after a decade at Butler and Indiana university, yesterday sent his line candidates through intensive contact work which had the boys completely unwound.

Coach Stagg sees each game as a victory possibility. Undoubtedly, he would like to defeat Yale, but he does not set greater store by such a triumph than a victory over Michigan, Purdue, or Illinois.

Nels Norgren, basketball coach and a former Maroon gridiron star, is helping Stagg with the back field. Emil Weislow is assisting Page. Otto Breidster, who was Page's assistant last year at Indiana, is working with the Maroon ends and so is Apitz, another former Maroon wingman.

Six Letter Men Return.

Six letter men are available for the 1931 team. They are Keith Parsons, center; Capt. Sam Horwitz and Stanley Ramberg, guards; Bernard Wein, end; Paul Stagg, quarter back, and Joe Temple, back.

Bill Cassells, whose father was an end on the 1899 team that won the western championship, is the outstanding tackle on the squad. Cassels won a minor letter last year, principally on his work in the Michigan game, which concluded the season. Trude, who had been expected to play the opposite tackle, is ineligible. John Spearing, a sophomore from Milwaukee; Robert Walsh, and Carl Galle are in the running for the job.

Pompeo Toigo, Warren Belstrom, and Frank Thompson are candidates for the end position opposite Wein. Berg and Zenner are substitute guards in addition to Young Stagg and the three sophomore backs, Coach Stagg will have a secondary quartet of stars. Temple, because of his kicking, is a particularly likely player. Robert Wallace, a junior who played end last year, is back for another season. He can substitute for Stagg or at a half back position.

Retain Open Style of Play.

Chicago will continue to depend on open play since none of the backs is an exceptional line plunger. Charles Bidwell, Allan Summers and George Mahoney are possible back field replacements.

BARTON, CUYLER HIT HOME RUNS IN SECOND GAME

It's Seven in Row for Bruins.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Just about the time defeat was swooping down to break up their winning streak yesterday, the Cubs started doing things in impressive style. They came through with a tying five run rally in the eighth inning and then triumphed in ninth, 8 to 7, to make their long day of toil doubly successful over the Braves. They previously had won the first game of a double header, 6 to 5. The victory streak now extends to seven games and the Cubs for the time being, are fairly well settled in third place.

VINCE BARTON.

The finish of the second game came in a fashion that might be expected from such a foe as Boston. Possibly they still were groggy from the five run eighth which Ki Cuyler touched off with a home run. Whatever the cause, they left the plate wide open in the ninth and the winning run skipped across, half the Braves meanwhile making frantic signs for somebody to occupy the important point and the other half standing idly by as if not quite sure what it was all about.

Barton Rambles Home.

When the ninth opened Barton, who previously had caused a little trouble with his 11th homer of his brief career, singled off Frankhouse, who had been summoned in the eighth to try to save Cantwell. After Barton's single Dan Taylor popped out. Grimm shot a grounder into deep short. Urbanski speared it with his gloved hand and whipped it to first, but the throw was both late and inaccurate. It rolled to the dugout and Catcher Bool pursued it. Meanwhile Barton, seeing the plate unguarded, kept moving until he reached there.

The first battle should have been a walkaway for Pat Malone. Encouraged by excellent support, he handled the Braves to suit his fancy for eight innings, but in the ninth blew up with a bang and was about to be relieved when he managed to escape with the tying run on second.

The Cubs forgot their fielding manners in the second game and caused all sorts of trouble, which, with some hits, let the Braves assume what until the eighth appeared to be an insurmountable lead.

FIRST GAME

The Cubs began producing in the second inning of the first game. Barton doubled to the right center field fence and scored on D. Taylor's single to right. The same sort of hitting added another run in the third. English opened with a two bagger down the left field line and came home when Herman lined a single to right.

English also started a three run splurge in the fifth. He singled off Selbold's shin with one out and dashed around to the plate on Herman's double to left. Cuyler walked, after which Bell singled to center, scoring Herman and putting Ki on third. Barton's fly to Berger gave Cuyler ample time to score the third run of the attack.

Luck Helps Grimm Score.

In concluding their run getting with one in the sixth the Cubs enjoyed a little luck. Grimm and Hartnett singled, Malone filed out and the bases were filled when English's fly to center was lost in the sun. Herman grounded to short and a double play should have occurred, but Urbanski fumbled momentarily and then had to be content with throwing to Moore to force Hartnett at third. Grimm scored on the play.

Mr. Malone's big blowup in the ninth got under way when both Urbanski and Maguire singled to right. The situation was relieved somewhat when two successive pinch hitters popped out. Apparently that just about exhausted Malone's tricks. He walked Richbourg to fill the bases. Moore whacked a single to center, Urbanski and Maguire scoring. Berger singled to left to drive Richbourg home. Moore scored on Sheeley's single. Then the flurry ended on Schulmerich's roller which Malone picked up and pegged to Grimm.

SECOND GAME

The Braves got a three run jump on Welch in the second inning of the second game. After two were out Maguire singled and started to steal while Welch was holding the ball. Welch threw to Grimm and Grimm to English, but Maguire slid in safely under the throw. Bool walked and Cantwell scratched a single to deep short. The three runners scored when Richbourg hammered a two bagger to the fence in right center.

A long hit by Berger enabled the Braves to hang up another in the third. He bounced a double off the left field bricks, went to third on Sheely's bunt, and home on a hit

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

University of Michigan has won a higher percentage of its football games in Western conference competition than any member of the organization. A survey of football records from 1895 to 1930, inclusive, reveals that the Wolverines have a winning average of 76.36 per cent against Big Ten teams.

Michigan was a charter member of the conference but withdrew in 1908. It remained outside the fold, going into the east for its major opponents, until 1917.

Coach Stagg's University of Chicago elevens rank next to Michigan in conference ratings for the same period. The Maroons have won 62.90 per cent of their games. Indiana, which always has had trouble making headway in Big Ten football, holds last place with a percentage of 27.19. Purdue and Northwestern, two of the three teams estimated to have the best chance of winning the 1931 championship, rank just above Indiana. The standings:

Michigan	.76.36	Ohio State	.45.05
Chicago	.62.90	Iowa	.43.51
Illinois	.57.96	Northwestern	.36.11
Minnesota	.57.03	Purdue	.30.46
Wisconsin	.54.96	Indiana	.27.19

From the box office standpoint professional football doesn't rank with the college brand, but George Halas and Dr. David Jones say the game still is being played. In fact they are optimistic enough to predict that this will be the most successful year financially the two Chicago clubs, the Cardinals and the Bears, have enjoyed.

The chief handicap the game faces according to these magnates, is that the public is not football wise. Otherwise they would not pack mammoth stadia to watch a couple of teams frequently made up of sophomores when they could wait until Sunday to see a game between teams led by such gridiron veterans as Ernie Nevers and Bronko Nagurski.

Both Mr. Halas and Dr. Jones are willing to wager their ball clubs against my yacht, summer home, and polo ponies that either one of their teams can whip any college team ever developed. For all we know, maybe they are right, but we would like to have one more talk with Bob Zuppke and Dick Hanley before taking them up.

Mr. Halas deplores sports editors' lack of sense when they give columns of space to the goings on of the collegians and pass up the professionals with casual mention. Says Mr. Halas:

"Pro football might draw as well as the amateur if it received as much publicity. Think of it. The papers print that old Siwash spent Monday limbering up, that the scrubs scrimmaged against the regulars Tuesday, that Onion seminary devoted Wednesday to polishing new plays for the game with Blank university, and after Thursday's workout Coach Dash still was undecided about his lineup for Saturday's game. On Friday the correspondent reports that Coach Dash has sent three scouts to chart every maneuver of the formidable opponent to be encountered the following week-end, and on Saturday we read that a capacity crowd is expected to make the old turnstiles spin. Then on the following Monday it starts all over.

Argentines Come from Behind in Late Periods.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 16.—A team that would not accept defeat swept across the green turf of International field today and dashed its way to victory. Santa Paula rode as horsemen are trained to ride on the plains of Argentina, and beat Greentree, on which Tommy Hitchcock Jr. starred, 11 to 9, in as fast a game as any international match ever held.

The men from South America fought a disheartening, uphill fight until the fifth chukker when Jose Reynal dribbled the ball to the center of the field and smashed it through the goal to tie the score, 5 to 5. The powerful Hitchcock and the long hitting George H. [Pete] Bostwick would not give an inch, however, and put their teammates ahead again before the period ended.

Harrington Evens Score.

The tide turned in the seventh, a fiercely fought chukker and the only one in which Greentree failed to score, when Alfredo Harrington again evened the count with a backhand goal.

Then Andres Gazzotti, the steeplechase rider of the Pampas who took the place of the injured Manuel Andrada, put the South Americans in the lead.

The final chukker saw mad riding. There were the headlong crashes of Hitchcock and the two Reynal brothers, Juan and Jose. Little Pete Bostwick bounced and bounded against first one and then another of the burly Argentines. Stewart Iglehart and the tall Alfredo Harrington rode two thrilling races in which neither gave the other an inch.

Hitchcock Gets 100 Yard Goal.

The finest shot of the day came from the greatest shot maker of them all—Thomas Hitchcock Jr., the ten goal internationalist. In the final minute of play Hitchcock, riding Lady Luck, pounced on the ball out past the 70 yard line along the east sideboards. His mallet whirled about his head like a cowboy's lasso and then it lifted the ball. The willow pellet soared into the wind, up and across the field and through the goal posts, a hundred yard tally, as the game ended.

Jose Reynal, 200 pounder, was the outstanding Argentine star this afternoon. He scored five South American goals and had to fight for every one. Juan Reynal, his brother, scored the first two Santa Paula goals in the third chukker, but brother Jose made it possible for him to place them between the posts.

Gazzotti, Hitchcock Crash.

Two of the Greentree goals came from free shots by Tommy Hitchcock. Gazzotti was responsible for one of these goals in the second chukker when he almost sent Hitchcock spinning from his saddle. They were both intent on the ball between them. Gazzotti got there last and kept going into Hitchcock. Hitchcock was on Katrina, his prize mount. Katrina's forelegs buckled and for the moment a bad spill appeared inevitable. Hitchcock yanked Katrina to her feet, however, and no damage was done except to Santa Paula's score.

The Greentree team appeared to weaken toward the end and their mounts were not as fast as those of the South American players. The long shots of Hitchcock and Bostwick kept on rolling off their mallets, however, and it took championship polo playing to keep Santa Paula ahead. Score:

Derringer Masters His Windup and National League Batters

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—St. Louis baseball experts, who are as accurate and keen as any of our ilk, predict that Paul Derringer will pitch the opening game of the world series here on Oct. 1. Which will be something, for Paul is a freshman in the National league and the books are not cluttered up with the names of young gents who have pitched world series openers their first year up.

While this has been Paul's first year in the National league the Cardinals have known about him for several years and have had confidence in his development, though he got off to a rather ungraceful start the first day he ever had on a Cardinal second hand uniform at Avon Park, Fla., in the spring of 1927.

Derringer had been pitching semi-pro ball in the West Virginia coal fields in 1926 and at the close of the season had been signed by a Cardinal scout.

Derringer's Big Moment; What a Windup!

After the 1927 Cardinal camp had been in session several days Paul was asked to display his stuff.

"It was a great moment," Paul confessed in discussing the opportunity today. "I knew they had signed me for my speed, and when they told me to show my stuff I decided that the thing to do was throw my very first pitch harder than I ever had before.

"Well, I wound up as I never wound up before and I sought to get some added steam by lifting my left foot high, even higher than I now lift it when bearing down.

"I never have quite figured it out, but while I was thus winding up, the spike on my left shoe got caught in the web of my glove, utterly ruining my momentous effort."

Observers who saw this debut say that the Cardinal management made arrangements to send Paul to Danville, Ill., even before kindly veterans were able to get the youngster untangled. But they knew he wouldn't always have trouble getting his glove caught on his foot, and their foresight has been handsomely rewarded, as you know.

Farm Product Makes Good in One Year.

The Cardinal chain store system has been remarkably successful in every phase of player education except the development of pitchers. Derringer is hailed as the first to make good the first year up from a Cardinal farm. There have been other successes developed in the Cardinal minors, but they all have done a lot of commuting before really catching on. Bill Hallahan, for instance, is purely a product of the system, but it took him six years of minor-major-minor migrations before he finally caught on as a star.

Even this year Manager Gabby Street wasn't sure that Derringer was ready for first line duty, despite a great season with Rochester in 1930. And when Paul developed a thumb injury and a touch of blood poisoning, it didn't look so good for the young man. When his injuries disappeared he at first was used for relief pitching. It was on the first eastern trip of the Cardinals that Derringer began to come into his own as a first line

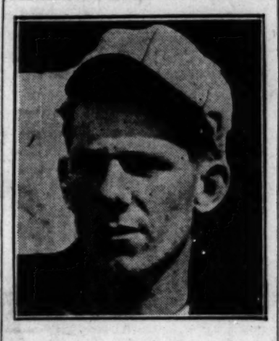
CARDS' ACE



PAUL DERRINGER.

St. Louis Is Jubilant Over Cards' Title

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—(AP)—St. Louis tonight celebrated the winning of its fourth National league baseball pennant, but not in the boisterous, noisy manner of 1926 when the Cardinals brought the first flag to St. Louis in 38 years.

With the clinching of the 1931 pennant accomplished this afternoon when Cincinnati defeated the Giants of New York in the first game of a double header, fans gleefully grinned and said, "They're in."

The Cardinals did not need their 6 to 3 victory over the Phils today to clinch the flag, but they played as if they did.

Manager Gabby Street said he had known the team would win and predicted victory for the Cardinals in the world series with the Philadelphia Athletics, starting here Oct. 1.

Fans Get Out the Horns.

There wasn't much celebrating downtown this afternoon but tonight the fans turned out with horns, noisemakers and confetti. They walked, or rode in automobiles, many of which were made to backfire and add to the noise for the occasion.

The Cards were playing the last of a six game series with Philadelphia when the news came of the Giant's defeat. There was quiet celebration of the pennant winning in the Cards' dugout. There wasn't any cheering but the boys exchanged hand shakes and each congratulated Manager Street. Then they went out and beat the Phillies for the sixth straight game.

"I knew my club would win," Street said, "I have a great club, a game ball club and I'm proud of it. I've never been worried, but I'm glad it's all over and we can turn our attention to the big series.

"Connie Mack is right when he says he's going to have a tough time in the world series. My team is going into those games just as they have gone into the season's contests." Score:

SOX RECAPTURE CELLAR! LOSE TO BOSTON, 2 TO 1

Frasier Gets Credit for Defeat.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 16.—The White Sox stormed the depths today as the climax of their irresistible downward sweep and won eighth place from the Red Sox. The White Sox lost, 2 to 1, in the closing game of their crucial series for the lowest honors in the American league and the boys left town for Philadelphia confident of defending their position until the end of the season.

They approach the impending games in Philadelphia fully aware they must keep constantly on their heels and keep their heads down if they are to lose in the face of the special effort which Connie Mack is preparing to put forth to thwart them.

Connie Mack is saving some of his worst players for this series and while there is nothing in the league regulations to forbid this, it is felt that such conduct is not right from the ethical standpoint. Still, it will take a great losing team to drop this series and the White Sox have been telling themselves that any team which could lose to the Rex Sox need not be afraid of winning from any team.

No Hot Dog, No Peanut Game.

The dramatic wind-up of the crucial Boston series aroused the disinterest of the customers as no other sporting event has done since Bryan Downey fought Johnny Wilson for the middleweight championship of the world. The attendance fell off by 18 customers and Mr. Harry Stevens' hot dog and peanut concession was reported to have scored a no hot dog, no bag of peanut game, the first time this perfect figure has been achieved since May 8, 1914 in the Brooklyn park of the old Federal league. As that record was made in an outlaw league, however, it is not considered valid in organized hot dog and peanut circles.

Today's record probably will be made the subject of a friendly protest in order to confirm its validity. The protest will be based on the ground that Mr. Will Delaney, the local manager of the Stevens hot dog and peanut concessions, gave away two hot dogs to George Moriarty and Will Guthrie, the umpires, before the start of the game.

It will be argued, however, that complimentary hot dogs should not count in the box score any more than flies hit in practice, cash sales only being considered for the official averages. The complimentary dog is never taken into consideration on days when thousands are sold for cash and, in consistency, it seems unfair to mar a perfect score by insisting that the honorary dogs consumed by the umpires should be scored as sales.

Mr. Olsen Was Wrong.

Marvin Olsen, a recruit shortstop working for the Red Sox, was the most gallant defender of eighth place as the Red Sox were slowly but firmly removed from their position after long occupancy. This young man came through with a slashing error in the fourth inning, placing young Billy

In the WAKE of the NEWS

GOLF BALLS.

As we understand it, the present larger and lighter golf ball was adopted because pros and the better players were getting too much distance with the old pellet. As a result, what once were good second shots were becoming pitches to the green. The Wake's game never was affected that way, but we duffers were not considered then except as possible candidates for assessments if it were necessary to remodel the courses to make them difficult enough for the experts.

Anyway, we duffers "squawked" about the new ball. We liked its size because it stood up better on the fairway and so was easier to hit. But with our choppy little swings, which do not carry through, we couldn't send it as far and we also found it more difficult to control because it was lighter. This was especially so in the wind. In a gale we not only were off the fairways but often almost in the next county. Probably many of the evils we attributed to the new ball were imaginary, but a duffer has to have imagination or he'd quit the game.

What happened to the pros and experts the new ball was designed to handicap? Well, they had time to practice and perfect control of the new pill. Possibly it affected their play slightly, but few are agreed even on that point.

Now the size of the new ball is to be retained and the weight probably restored to the old standard. Isn't that only adding to the advantages of the pros and experts, going even farther than the original ball? Speaking only for us duffers, however, all right, what of it? It's simply wonderful for us—the "backbone" of the game as we are called when extra assessments are levied to make the course more perfect for the sharks—to be even considered at all? Our "'screaming" drives of 130 and 140 yards may be expected to return to us with this new comLination ball. The Wake is willing to wager we can get into just as many water hazards with it — no matter what its ultimate weight—as now. But it's so gratifying to be considered.

Helpful Hints.

It is suggested that it is advisable to call a doctor just before one is about to be taken ill. Quite right. Let us go farther. Why not notify the police just before the apartment is to be robbed and the fire department before a cigaret starts a blaze, unless, of course, one happens to be overinsured? B. Acardi.

JOHNNY LEHMAN TAKES LEAD IN AUCHTERMUCHTY

Sweet Second, 5 Strokes Behind.

Oak Park Country clubs' annual classic, the Auchtermuchty, drew a field of more than a hundred yesterday. The intense humidity caused two of the contestants to retire, but all others finished.

Johnny Lehman of Olympia Fields was low for the first 27 holes. He has a lead of five strokes over Art Sweet of Ridgemoor to begin today's second half of the 54 holes, with 76—37—113. In the afternoon round of nine holes Lehman shot the 530 yard 16th in an eagle three. His tee shot was even with the bunker on the left of the fairway, a good 300 yards, and his spoon landed ten feet from the pin.

Sweet had 118. The Lehman, Sweet, W. B. Henri, and G. D. Wilkinson foursome had low net and low gross for the half way mark. Lehman's card:

Watch Your Step, You Hunters, the Season's Nov. 1-30

BY BOB BECKER.

So many changes have been made in the water fowl hunting regulations this fall that many hunters still are confused about the dates for Illinois. Here is a sample inquiry showing how duck hunters are puzzled over the recent ruling which set the Illinois season opening for Nov. 1.

"Now that the duck season has been changed to Nov. 1, does it affect geese and coots, too? As I understand it, coots [mudhens] can be shot between Oct. 1 at noon and Dec. 31; geese between noon Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, and jacksnipe between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31. Isn't this correct? If not, kindly explain the situation."

The recent order setting the water fowl season opening for Nov. 1 takes in ducks, geese, brant and mudhens. In other words, there will be no hunting for these birds in Illinois except between Nov. 1 and Nov. 30. There has been no change in the jacksnipe season, which will open Oct. 1.

Therefore, October will have to be the jacksnipe month this fall as far as the marsh hunters are concerned. Then in November the mallard, goose and mudhen hunters can begin.

This means a sad October for the northern Illinois mudhen hunters, who bombard the lowly coots with a great barrage of powder and shot annually. But, Uncle Sam has spoken. No mudhens may be hunted until Nov. 1.

Indiana hunters will swing into action against water fowl on Oct. 16 and close Nov. 15. Under the new ruling, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, and Kansas will get Oct. 20 to Nov. 19 for the water fowl season. All dates are inclusive. It will be noticed that although states have different open seasons, all are for 30 days.

Sox Regain Cellar! Lose to Boston

Sullivan on first base. Bull Durham, the Red Sox pitcher, suddenly finding himself, then pitched an opportune two bagger to Fonseca, which sent Sullivan to third. As he scored on Appling's fly the customers came up cheerful to jeer with cries of "Boo, who said you muggs was losers? Back to first division where you belong, you major leaguers."

Olsen was the one member of the Red Sox who refused to acknowledge victory until the game was definitely won and he almost turned the tide when he dropped Frasier's pop fly in the eighth. But there were two out at the time and he was fighting a lone battle, for there was nobody to cooperate with him, so the run died when Blue bounced out to the first baseman. A timely muff here would have let the ball roll to the outfield and a run might presently have come in to tie the score and revive for the Red Sox a fighting chance of defeat.

The Pitchers Fell Down, Too.

For two teams engaged in a bitter struggle for eighth place the White Sox and Red Sox played remarkably futile baseball, and it was less a credit to the White Sox than a reproach to the Boston club that the White Sox finally came through to protect their disadvantage through the final inning. Both pitchers, Durham for Boston and Frasier for the White Sox, seemed to be unconcerned as victory threatened, and while Frasier will receive credit for losing the game that put his club in last place, Durham won by only the merest misfortune. He allowed only three hits, a poor enough record for a pitcher chosen to defend the cellar, but Frasier allowed only four.

Webb Might Have Muffed One.

The customers were inclined to abuse the Red Sox for missing today's opportunity. Webb and Oliver in the outfield were blamed particularly for pulling down flies that might have gone for two baggers and Webb at bat certainly seemed imbued with a victory complex when he hit not one double, but two. This player obviously does not belong with an eighth place contender, for he cracks under pressure and comes through with hits when all seems safely lost. These two doubles brought Webb's record to 63 for the year, which is one two baser behind George Burns' all time major league record.

HOPPE RETAINS BILLIARD LEAD OVER COCHRAN

Willie Hoppe held the lead at two blocks to one in three cushions and Welker Cochran led by the same margin in the 18-3 balk line match at the end of the third block in their exhibition matches at Kieckhefer's. Hoppe won at three cushions yesterday afternoon, 25 to 21, in 20 innings, having a high run of 5 to Cochran's 7. Cochran triumphed at balk line, 200 to 186, in six innings. Cochran had a high run of 120, against Hoppe's 102.

Hoppe won at three cushions and balk line on Tuesday afternoon, and on Tuesday night Cochran came back to take both games.

On total points Hoppe holds the lead at both games. At three cushions he has made 74 points to Cochran's 70 in 81 innings, and at 18-2 balk line he has totaled 510 points in 10 innings to Cochran's 416 in 12 innings.

MARION LAKE SECOND WITH 266 IN BUFFALO MEET

Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, Long Island champion, was second with 266, Miss Helen MacMorran, Chicago, who was leading after 36 holes, dropped down to third with 267. The Buffalo favorite, Peggy Wattles, was fourth with 268.

Jane Weiller, Chicago district champion, was not up to her usual game, and withdrew to practice for the women's national next week at Buffalo Country club.

ESPINOSA WINS, FOULIS LOSES IN P. G. A. PLAY

Providence, R. I., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—With only three of the eight matches close enough to excite galleryites, the National Professional Golf association championship progressed to the quarter finals here today. Gene Sarazen, qualifying medalist; Horton Smith, Billy Burke, national open champion; Cyril Walker, and Tommy Armour, defending champion, all won by comfortable margins.

In only one instance did a player stage what could be termed a miraculous comeback after being counted out of the running earlier in the day. That was Cyril Walker, who fought an uphill battle to eliminate John Golden, Noroton, Conn., 5 and 4.

Sarazen Takes Early Lead.

Jim Foulis, young Chicago pro, had his streak snapped today by Denny Shute of Akron, O., 2 and 1. Bob Crowley of Haverhill, Mass., kept close enough for a while to cause Billy Burke some uneasiness, but Burke pulled away to win by 5 and 4. Horton Smith beat Willie Macfarlane, former open titlist, 6 and 5. Armour defeated Murray of Valparaiso, Ind., 5 and 3.

Espinosa Beats Mehlhorn.

Abe Espinosa of Chicago defeated Wild Bill Mehlhorn of New York, 2 and 1. Bill went along nicely, taking the lead, then relinquishing it, but always close enough to regain it, until they neared the turn of the afternoon round. Espinosa then won four holes in a row to end Bill's titular aspirations.

Derringer's Delivery Fools the Sluggers

Beating Vance a Tonic for Derringer.

It was Burleigh Grimes' turn to pitch against Vance, but Manager Street decided he'd not use up a star against the great Dazzy. Derringer was elected as the goat. The game was one of the greatest of the year. Up till the eighth inning the score was 0 to 0 and Dazzy had a no hit contest in prospect. In the eighth George Watkins beat out a bunt—you remember the game. Watkins went to third on the first outfield hit off Vance, a single by Bottomley.

Mr. Vance put on a higher hat than usual. And to impress the Cardinals with his greatness and calm, started a series of lob throws to hold Bottomley on first and at the same time make the batter nervous and everything. Mr. Vance finally lobbed his throw to first just a little higher and a little lazier than usual. That was what Manager Street, coaching at third base, and Watkins were waiting for. George stole home and when the ball game was over Paul Derringer was the holder of a 1 to 0 shutout over the most arrogant as well as the most talented of all pitchers.

It must have been tonic to Paul, for he's been rampant ever since.

Derringer's period of greatest effectiveness began on Aug. 23, an 11 inning shutout of the Boston Braves. He then continued a chain of scoreless innings with a 5 to 0 shutout against Pittsburgh and a 1 to 0 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. The chain was broken after 33 scoreless sessions when the Phillies crashed through without the aid of a hit. After errors by Sparky Adams and Jimmy Wilson had broken his string, Paul demonstrated his calm by letting runners die on third and second when he fanned two batsmen to retire the side.

Beats Phillies for His 17th Victory.

33	17	6	187	196	75	53	123	4	5

While an exceedingly green young man when he first appeared at a Cardinal training camp, Derringer now is known as the champion's best dressed man, with a slight shade over Ernie Orsatti. He can break 80 consistently at golf and also dresses a smart game, especially as to his 18 fancy sweaters and socks to match.

Derringer was born in Springfield, Ill., 24 years ago, but now is a resident of Illinois' own Williamson county. He is 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 210. Paul is married.

Boley Came Up from Minors and Then A's Went Up, Too

[This is the fourth of a series of articles about the Philadelphia Athletics.]

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 16.—Some years ago a lawyer by the name of John Conway Toole was president of the International league, and one of his principal worries was Joe Boley, the shortstop of the Baltimore Orioles. Mr. Toole used to frequent the midwinter gatherings of the major league magnates trying to sell Joe Boley and a few other hands away from the Orioles in the hope of cutting the Orioles down to the right size for the other clubs of the International. The Orioles in a minor league were a better ball club than many of the major league clubs and there was so little competition for them that business was very bad.

Jack Dunn, the manager of the Baltimore club, also wished to sell Joe Boley away, but he couldn't get his price. So he had to hold him back year after year, retarding the young man's professional advancement. In justice to the boy he raised his pay to about $9,000 a year, which was more than he could rightly afford, and waited for a buyer at his price until he couldn't hold him back any more.

Athletics Started Going Up Along with Boley.

So, finally, Mr. Dunn sold his shortstop to the Athletics at a private and confidential figure, believed to have been much lower than the asking price which John Conway Toole had been quoting for several years. On a comparison of the Orioles and the Athletics at that time, Joe Boley was really sold down the river, not up, for the Orioles were a better club than the team he went to. This was in 1925.

OLD BUT GOOD

During most of his eight years in Baltimore Boley had been a really great shortstop and a trustworthy hitter, especially in the pinches, and there was some thought at the time of the sale that the young man had blushed away his best blushes comparatively unseen. It seemed unlikely that he would enjoy many years in the majors.

He is now serving his sixth season with the Athletics and playing in his third world series, and the team's turn from lower mediocrity may be said to date from the time when Boley and his partner, Max Bishop, the Orioles' second baseman, finally broke away from Baltimore for the short trip up to Philadelphia.

Boley's name has an Irish smack to it, but this name is only a linotyper's convenient invention. His right name is John Bolensky, but newspapers don't use rubber type and the linotypers took the liberty of calling him Bole'y, in order to squeeze him into half column box score measure. Thus Aloysius Simanski became Al Simmons, or, in the very narrow columns, just S'mm's. Why they changed Boley's front name from John to Joe I have no idea. Maybe they liked Joe better.

He Still Likes to Play, Even if It Is His Job.

Joe Boley comes from Mahonoy City, Pa., in the same general, blighted country that sent up Buckey Harris, Mike McNally and old John Picus Quinn to the major leagues and the Latzo brothers to the ring.

He is smallish and socially reticent, but not at all demure on the ball field, and Connie Mack has a special liking for him because he loves to get out and play a game of ball, even though ball playing is his job. Two years ago when the A's were driving along to win their first pennant he hurt his throwing arm and his efficiency dwindled somewhat. He has been ailing now and again this year, also, and he will have to be watched from now on for the signs that tell when a player has fallen away.

John Conway Toole and Squeaky Jack Dunn are dead now, which is a special pity because they would be pleased to know that Boley had enough left after all his years of major league work with a minor league team to play into three world series.

Hygro Says Adieu to Chicago with Fast Workout

As a farewell gesture to his many admirers among the turf followers of Chicago, Hygro, the west's leading candidate for the 2 year old championship, worked a brilliant six furlongs over the muddy Lincoln Fields course between races yesterday afternoon.

Traveling in even stride all the way and not attempting to show his early burst of speed, he went the distance in 1:17 and was breezing all the way. It was a remarkable workout considering track conditions.

Hygro, with others of the Nevada Stock Farm stable, will be shipped to Baltimore today and the spectacular Nevada colt's first eastern engagement will be in the $30,000 Eastern Shore handicap at Havre de Grace on Sept. 27.

TRAMBLIE BOXES SHARKEY TONIGHT IN 10 ROUND BOUT

A rematch, at six rounds, between Billy Baker, north side middleweight, and Joe Mendoza of the west side is also on the card. Baker was knocked out by Mendoza in the sixth and final round recently. Pat McLaughlin, heavyweight, meets Gus Sigity of South Bend in six rounds.

Cubs Defeat Braves Twice, 6-5 and 8-7

through the infield by Schulmerich. Then Bool opened the fourth with a hit to left and was sacrificed by Cantwell. Richbourg singled to right and Barton let it bounce past him. Bool scored and Richbourg went to third on the error. Welch was excused to let Warneke finish the inning without further mishap.

Three Hits, No Runs.

Despite two singles and a double in their half of the second, the Cubs couldn't get a man around to the plate. The reason for this was that a double play occurred between the two singles. Better luck marked their effort in the fourth, however. Barton's fly fell out of reach in right for a double. Grimm scored him with a triple to center.

Barton's home run into the right field seats enlivened things a bit for the weary spectators in the sixth. It also revived in the Braves the idea of doing a little more scoring on their own account. They picked up a pair in the seventh. Richbourg led off with a single and Moore bunted in front of the plate. Hemsley spent so much time fumbling that nobody was caught. Berger then sacrificed and Sheely's fly to left let Richbourg score. Moore came home on Schulmerich's single.

That Big Eighth Inning.

Cuyler's homer which started all the rumpus in the eighth sailed into the seats in right. Bell then doubled past third, but the next two batters were of no assistance. Grimm kept things in motion by walking, and Hemsley lined a triple to right center, sending Bell and Grimm over the plate. Blair, batting for Teachout, singled and Hemsley scored. When Cantwell walked English he was sent to the bench and Frankhouse took over the pitching job. He was no improvement. He walked both Herman and Cuyler, forcing Blair home with the tying run. Bell then closed the inning by grounding out to Maguire.

Portage Park Boosters to Play Weaver's Team

Chicago Cards Defeat Mills, 25-0, in Mud

Madison, Wis., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The Chicago Cardinals tonight defeated the Mills in the first night pro football game ever played in Madison, 25 to 0.

Nevers carried the ball for a eleven yard gain to count the first touchdown in the second quarter. Glasgow scored the succeeding two touchdowns of the period with a run of 20 yards, and a 60 yard return of a punt. Rogge, end, and Gordon, tackle, stood out in the Cardinals' line play.

Boyd, reserve back, intercepted a Mills' pass in the last quarter and galloped 30 yards for the final score.

The contest was delayed an hour by a heavy drizzle, and most of the second half was played in mud. Summaries:

Captures Last Race at Record Odds.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Bill Looney, the 4 year old son of Free Booter, in the stable of J. N. McFadden of Chicago, can't beat a real good selling plater on a race track that is fast. But gallop old Bill out on a track that is muddy and he's a regular rascal who is liable to throw a pair of flying heels into the eyes of any man's horse.

Bill flip flopped from the plater ranks into a contest with some of our good overnight handicappers in the Eastlake purse at six furlongs at Lincoln Fields yesterday.

The track was muddy, so Bill was right at home. It didn't make any difference to him if he was out on a party with some real blue boods.

Beats the Favorites.

Then what did Bill do after most everybody in the crowd had wagered on High Tom, Double Heart, Mucker, and two or three others? He just stood all his blue blooded playmates right on their heads and went on to win by four lengths. And those who had faith in him collected $18.16 to win, $7.00 to place, and $4.24 to show in the $2 mutuels.

Bill made his presence known right from the beginning and broke in front. Then for just about a sixteenth of a mile High Tom, the favorite outran him. From there on till he finished Bill never left the result in doubt.

He rushed into a lead of a length and increased it to two lengths turning into the stretch. He laughed back at those trailing him nearing the finish and pulled out into a four lengths advantage over High Tom, which finished second. Mucker got up in the last strides to beat Ald. Coughlin's Very Well out of third money. Bill Looney ran the muddy six furlongs in 1:15 4-5.

Miss Caroline Pays $319.70.

Miss Caroline, a 3 year old daughter of Hourless-War Tidings, winner of the seventh race, was the longest priced horse to win in Chicago this season. She paid $319.70 to win, $103.30 to place, and $36.84 to show when she beat Englewood by a length and a half. Evergreen Queen, another long shot, was third.

Transgression had been the favorite at about even money, but ran out on all the turns and was eased up at the stretch. Miss Caroline, racing on the inside, took the lead soon after the stretch run started. Only a handful of two dollar betters cashed in on the long shot.

Chene Wins Again.

The Humboldt park claiming purse also brought an upset when Chene, from Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's stable, turned up as a handy winner by a length and a half from the even money favorite Shasta Broom.

In the early part of the race, Shasta Broom, Uncle Henry, and Reverberate raced only noses apart and coming into the stretch they still were in that order, but all went a trifle wide seeking more solid footing.

As they pulled to the outside Jockey Elston drove Chene through the muddy going in next to the rail. He saved a half dozen or more lengths and Chene could run faster in the mud than the others could out on a dry looking strip in the middle of the track. He was pulling away at the end and ran the mile in 1:43. Reverberate hung on to beat Uncle Henry out of the show money.

Ratterman, Wolverine Back, Injured

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Fred Ratterman, sophomore halfback from Cincinnati, was Michigan's first casualty of the season today. He was removed from practice due to an injured knee, and physicians reported a cartilage break.

Jack Heston of Detroit, son of Willie Sr., outpunted his sophomore mate, Herm Everhardus, Heston's kicks exceeded Everbardus' by ten yards on the average.

Athletic Director Fielding H. Yost spent some time assisting the veteran, Maynard [Doc] Morrison in passing from center, Morrison's weakness last season.

GOPHERS LOSE BURDICK

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Quentin Burdick, outstanding blocker in the Minnesota back field, was lost to the squad indefinitely today when he was rushed to the university infirmary with an acute attack of appendicitis. Burdick refused to be operated on immediately because it would keep him out of football in his last year at Minnesota. School officials awaited the arrival of his parents from Williston, N. D., before letting the boy's decision stand.

Valenciennes Wins Belmont Ladies' Purse

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Mrs. John D. Hertz, owner of the famous Anita Peabody, and winner of the Tomboy for fillies last Monday with Seven Veils, saw two others of her fillies run one, two in the Ladies' handicap at Belmont Park this afternoon when Valenciennes won, with Risque second. Backed down to the odds-on price of 9 to 10, the Hertz horses had the best of the running throughout and earned $3,425 between them.

A half length separated Valenciennes and Risque at the finish, with Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Polly Flay another half length away in third place. The order of finish after that was Blind Lane, Conclave, Allez Vite, and Chalice.

The time for the mile was 1:37 2-5, with the winner under 116 pounds. This represented a big pull in the weights over Risque, which carried top weight of 126, ten pounds over the scale for 3 year old fillies.

Risque won the Alabama at Saratoga last month, and has been a stake winner as a 2 year old. Valenciennes, now 4, also has a stake victory back of her, but her race today was the best in a long time. She was last for most of the race, but put on that old time rush at the end which formerly had made her a formidable competitor. Charles Kurtsinger was the winning rider.

Another short priced favorite won when Mrs. Katherine Elkins Hitt's Icicle won the Bowling Brook steeplechase, which saw only four starters go to the post. Icicle won by four lengths under top weight of 148 pounds.

CENTRAL SECTION FAMED FOR PREP GRID CHAMPIONS

Lindblom Team Defends City Crown.

(This is the last of a series of articles on football prospects in the Chicago Public High School league.)

The section of championship football teams. That's what they call the central division of the Chicago Public School Football league. For ever since 1912, when Englewood won the title, teams representing other sections of the league have taken the title only three times—Lane in 1923 and Schurz in 1927 and 1929.

When Lane snapped the central section's long string of victories by winning from Tilden, Lindblom, which entered the league in 1920, began to move into the title picture and in recent years Lindblom has met and defeated the teams from the north section which were growing more powerful every year.

When Schurz Came Through.

Lindblom failed once, however, losing to Schurz in 1929, but it regained the championship last year by defeating a team from another section, Harrison Tech of the west division, which had eliminated Lane in the semi-final contests, for its fourth league title.

The champions hope to have their fifth title tucked away at the end of this year's campaign, but the other members of the central section, Hyde Park, Englewood, Bowen, and Tilden, all former titleholders, are the first obstacles in their path.

Carrying Lindblom's hopes this year are a number of players who last season were members of the second team. Only two men of the 27 who were awarded letters have reported to Coach E. L. Moore. The regulars are Ralph Mack, quarter back, captain of the squad, and Dave Sohr, center.

At Tilden, 1928 champion, which lost to Schurz in the final game of the title in 1927, there will be one of the strongest back fields in the central section. All of Tilden's ball carriers this year played on last season's squad.

Plenty of Good Linemen.

The regular linemen are Bob Schroeder, left tackle; Berg, right tackle; Finwall, a guard, and Wetel, right end. The new players are Postaer, Bagdon, who probably will play at left end, and Condon, who also will be used in the line.

"This year's team looks good, despite the loss of Co-Captains Edward Puhr and Hal Schiefer, who were two of the outstanding tackles in the league last year, and 12 others who won letters last year," said Coach Charles Harvey. "but you can't tell in the central section."

And What a Tackle!

One of Hyde Park's regular linemen will be Adolph Brez, a tackle who weighs 236 pounds and is 6 feet 5 inches tall. He is a sophomore. Other new players are Russell Mooth, Lee Schwab, Bud Lovell, Edward Guest, Clinton Hummer, Leon Meyer, and Lester Polochek.

There will be only two veterans on Bowen's team this year. There are Wilson, a tackle, and Fischer, who will play right end. Others in the Bowen line are Carlson, Johnson, Swanson, Deich, Riley, Robertson, and Richardson.

Six Vets at Englewood.

Chuck Palmer, the former Northwestern university athlete, will start his seventh season as coach at Englewood. Six veterans, including Capt. Joe Garland and Quarter Back Dick Whittington, have returned. Others in the back field will be Victor Ponto and Lindquist, half backs.

Pete Rozzus and Sam Laskin, who were substitutes on last year's squad, have won regular positions this season. Rozzus will play in the back field, while Laskin will be at right guard.

The central section schedule:

Heat or No Heat, Hanley Holds Two Drills for N. U.

A scorching sun greeted Northwestern's football squad in its second workout of the season yesterday, forcing the players to doff part of their football regalia. Many candidates reported with stiff muscles as a result of the first day practice.

In spite of the weather Coach Hanley held the scheduled double practice. The afternoon workout was postponed until 5:30 o'clock, which enabled the squad to escape some of the heat. The drill was devoted to fundamental work as a build up for the first scrimmage of the year, scheduled for today. Hanley plans to pit two varsity teams against each other and will follow this with a regulation game with the freshmen Saturday. A squad of yearlings reported to Maury Kent, freshman coach, yesterday and went to work at once on Nebraska formations.

At the close of practice Coach Hanley announced every member of the squad would be vaccinated with small pox antitoxin today as a precautionary move to prevent any such occurrence as last season when Hank Bruder took

SUITS ATTACKING ROAD WAGE LAW HEARD BY COURT

Both Actions Question Constitutionality.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.] In the Sangamon County Circuit court, convened in its venerable hall here, where Abraham Lincoln served as a state legislator, Judge Charles G. Briggle today heard arguments contending that the prevailing wage act regulating rates to be paid labor on public construction, is not in accord with the constitution of a government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

GEO. S. BRIGGLE.

A portrait of the emancipator hung down from dusty walls upon Attorney S. S. Duhamel as he presented a contention that the wage law is "not for the people" in that the statutory bolster to wages on public construction cheats the taxpayers of a fair return on their money. The law, backed by the Civic Federation of Chicago and other civic and business organizations, is seeking to enjoin the state from paving the Blue Island road through Harvey, Cook county, with the scale of wages fixed by the governor's arbitration board, a scale which recognized the union standard as the prevailing rate. The actual plaintiffs are Misses Annie Craig Pigott and Roberta Pigott, aides of Oak Park.

Dunnaiste Protest Also Heard.

Also before the court was another taxpayers' injunction suit prosecuted by Attorney A. M. Fitzgerald, seeking to enjoin the state from awarding a contract for seven miles of paving in Madison county, near East St. Louis.

Both suits, while aimed specifically at individual projects, ask that the prevailing wage act be declared unconstitutional.

Judge Briggle took under advisement the Madison county suit and set Oct. 1 as a tentative date to complete the hearing of the Cook county case.

The forenoon was consumed 'in hearing another legal action over the prevailing wage act, the mandamus proceedings brought by B. F. Nelch, president of the Illinois Highway and Municipal Contractors' association, asking an ouster for the arbitration board as appointed by Gov. Emmerson. This board consists of Ray Yuill, George Ottens, and H. W. Hartman.

Contracts Awarded.

State highway officials late today awarded contracts for $396,490 of road and bridge construction, based on bids opened Sept. 8. The contract for the substructure of the viaduct on route 4 that is to open the Des Plaines river and Santa Fé and Chicago and Illinois Western railroads, northwest of Justice, Cook county, was awarded J. E. Albrecht company, Chicago, whose bid was $110,583.69. This, with the superstructure contract, recently awarded, brings the cost of this link in Cook county's highway system to $403,394.78.

The other award in the metropolitan district announced today was 2.8 miles of paving on routes 54 and 55, south of Elmhurst, De Page county, awarded to the Arcole Construction company, Niles Center, $108,000.

WOMEN SEEK AID IN PICKING HOME FOR GIRL

Hoping to settle the dispute amicably as to which of them shall obtain the custody of Betty Louise Fuller, 3 years old, the child's mother, Mrs. Florence Fuller, and Mrs. Martha Thompson, Indian with whom the child formerly lived, yesterday sought the advice of the authorities of the Chicago Home for the Friendless.

Betty Louise has lived at the home, which is located at 5059 Vincennes avenue, since she was returned from Rockford to Chicago in July. Police at first believed she had been kidnaped by Mrs. Thompson. The Indian woman upon her release came back to her home at 58 East Grand avenue and conducted a search for Mrs. Fuller, whom she said she had not seen for a year. On Tuesday Mrs. Fuller was found at 867 North La Salle street.

Both women saw the child as it slept but were not allowed to awaken it. They were then sent to the Juvenile court. It was learned that a conference to determine where the child will be placed will be held with Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. Thompson said she did not attempt to see Betty Louise because she was unemployed and could not support her.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE SOLVED

Norristown, Pa., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Edward W. Bok left a gross estate of $23,718,981 when he died at his Mountain Lake [Fla.] estate, Jan. 9, 1930, it was revealed in a transfer inheritance tax appraisal filed here today.

Because of a provision in Mr. Bok's will requesting that no inventory or appraisal of his estate "be filed for public inspection," its value had not heretofore become known. For purposes of probate the will had put the value at "$200,000 and upward."

Stocks and bonds comprise the bulk of the estate, the value of the former totaling $17,499,188, and that of the latter $5,263,985. Dividends are included. Real estate is listed at $371,370, miscellaneous property at $368,953.70, and mortgages, notes, cash, and insurance, $216,837.58.

ROBBERS RAID HUNTLEY BANK, OBTAIN $3,000

Four young gunmen held up the Huntley State bank at Huntley, fifteen miles northwest of Elgin yesterday, and escaped with $3,000 in currency. All were armed with revolvers.

The bandits entered the bank five minutes before closing time. They herded W. P. Hoy, president; W. F. Bartelt, cashier; P. H. Marsh and Miss Elsie Heuer, assistant cashiers, and Louis Ackerman, a customer, into a rear room. The victims were forced to lie on the floor while one of the bandits stood guard.

The other three men scooped up the money, yelled to the man in the rear room and all fled. There were $10,000 in the bank vault, but the time lock was on.

The bandits escaped in a small auto, which had been stolen yesterday morning in Chicago, and abandoned it six miles out of Huntley. They completed their flight, police believe, in a large machine containing a buxom woman, about 35 years old. The smaller, abandoned automobile was taken from J. W. Alstolt, 6336 Drexel boulevard.

W. L. SOUTHWORTH VETERAN OF '61, IS DEAD AT 93

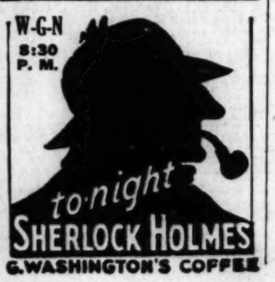
William L. Southworth, 93 years old, a resident of Chicago since 1856, died last night in his home, 909 Airdrie place. Mr. Southworth was born in New York City, and came to Chicago as a boy.

He served in the civil war, and was the secretary of the first lumberman's exchange organized in Chicago. He was engaged in the lumber business until 1880.

Later he became active in politics, and was for several decades an employé in the office of the county clerk.

Sister of De Paul Chief Dies Week After Father

Miss Alice Corcoran, sister of the Very Rev. Dr. Francis V. Corcoran, C. M., president of De Paul university, died suddenly on Tuesday, supposedly from shock over the death of their father, Martin Corcoran, a week ago yesterday. She died in St. Joseph's hospital. Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock this morning at St. Vincent's church. Burial will be private. Surviving Miss Corcoran besides Dr. Corcoran are Irene and Paul Corcoran, sister and brother. Miss Corcoran lived at 2322 Sheffield avenue.



GOTHAM EDITOR, 23 STORIES UP, LEAPS TO DEATH

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Parker Lloyd-Smith, 29, managing editor of Fortune Magazine, today committed suicide by jumping from his twenty-third floor apartment in East Eighty-sixth street. His body struck the eight floor extension of the Hotel Croydon, where it was found some hours later.

Overwork and the heat were given by the police as causes of the suicide. The young editor left a note for his mother, Mrs. Walter Lloyd-Smith, with whom he lived and who is now in the Adirondacks, in which the phrase "heat is frightful" attested to his immediate reason for taking his life.

The note read:

"Mother Charm:

"Heat is frightful—but this a a farewell—if this is waiting, I shall wait for you. My love and gratitude always."

Fortune, the magazine Lloyd-Smith edited, was hailed 18 months ago as a distinct innovation in the class magazine field. Published as a monthly by the publishers of Time, it is a distinguished and handsome journal of the stories of American and world business, specializing in exhaustive and well written accounts of various industries and the personalities behind them.

NEW ZEALAND AND JAPAN SHAKEN BY SEVERE QUAKE

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Queenstown was shaken this morning by a severe earthquake, which broke windows and frightened the populace. The epicenter was estimated as about 380 miles distant.

Tokio Is Shaken.

TOKIO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake shook Tokio and vicinity at 9:45 p. m. [7:45 a. m. Chicago daylight saving time] today.

Mortician Is Arrested on Stolen Auto Tag Charges

Ernest H. Williamson, colored, a mortician at 5121 South State street, was arrested by inspectors of the city license department yesterday when it was learned that fourteen city vehicle license tags used on his cars had been stolen. Williamson, according to Fred Fischman, superintendent of the license department, used the tags on ten passenger cars, three hearses, and one ambulance which he uses in his business. He was to be booked on thirty charges, requiring a bond of $3,000.

Ends His Life with Rope on North Shore Estate

The body of Charles Witt, 83 years old, of Wheeling was found yesterday by mushroom pickers on the estate of Philip D. Armour, on Green Bay road west of Lake Bluff. A rope was about the neck and fastened to a tree. The body was identified by Leo A. Grose of Wheeling, a Cook county deputy sheriff, and by Witt's son, Elmer. A coroner's jury in Lake county returned a verdict of suicide. Witt disappeared from his home on Aug. 18.

SOUTH PARKS TO SEEK BIDS ON $500,000 BONDS

The south parks commissioners yesterday voted to advertise for bids on a $500,000 bond issue to extend the world's fair island from opposite 11th street south to Roosevelt road. The commissioners also voted to advertise for bids for construction work on the Yates avenue boulevard system and a subway which will extend 47th street east under the Illinois Central tracks into Berwyn Park.

Charles E. Fox, director of appraisals for the board of assessors, and Thomas D. Collins, a building expert, were appointed to estimate damages caused to neighborhood property by the improvements. Condemnation proceedings will be heard before Circuit Judge Craig Hood on Sept. 21.

Col. John Stewart, representing the World's Fair committee, offered a bid of 95 on every $100 worth of the bonds. It was refused by the board as too low.

$750,000 ASSETS IN MARRIOTT'S ESTATE LISTED

An inventory of the estate of the late Abraham R. Marriott, former president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, who died on May 20 at his home at 518 North East avenue, Oak Park, was approved yesterday by N. J. Bonnell, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner. Real estate and stocks with a total value of $750,000 were listed.

More than thirty kinds of stocks were included in the inventory. Among those listed were 1,380 shares of the Chicago Title and Trust company capital stock, 700 shares of the National Bank of the Republic capital stock, 2,500 shares of the Hubbard-Elliott Copper company capital stock, 717 shares of the Texas corporation capital stock, and 155 shares of the Illinois Title company capital stock.

UTILITY STOCKS ON BOARD HERE CLOSE STEADIER

Insull Securities Gain Following Support.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

After tossing about for two days in a sea of liquidation the Chicago market steadied yesterday and sponsors of the utility stocks were able to stabilize prices around the previous day's closing figures. Effective support was mustered for the Insull securities, which made moderate recovery while prices in general were easing slightly.

La Salle street heard that a pool had been formed to support the Insull stocks. Considerable public buying was also said to have come into the market from the widespread owners of these stocks. This buying was apparently based on the belief that the recent selling represented the final phase of liquidation and that bear market prices for these stocks have been reached. In recent months the Insull stocks have maintained their price position better than similar groups and there was a widespread feeling that some sort of readjustment to bring these prices into line with the general market was inevitable.

Bank Liquidation.

It is generally believed that a good part of the recent selling represented liquidation of loans by banks in preparation for the quarterly bank call which will be issued in a few weeks. Trading in Middle West Utilities continued active, with transactions reaching 67,000 shares. Reflecting the better support the stocks opened a fraction higher and sold up to 11¾. The final trade in the issue was made at 11, representing a net gain of ⅞ for the day. Insull Utility sold up to 16¼, closing at 15½ for a slight gain, on a turnover of 33,000 shares. Commonwealth Edison was quiet and easier as the company announced the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share. This is the 168th consecutive quarterly payment made by the company over a period of 42 years.

Resume Preferred Dividends.

Signode Steel Strapping company yesterday resumed dividends on the preferred stock by voting a disbursement of 62½ cents to apply on the unpaid dividend due July 15. The distribution will be made Oct. 15 to holders of record Sept. 30. No action was taken on the common stock dividend. The stock sold up a fraction yesterday on odd lot transactions following announcement of the dividend. Common stock sold off to 2.

Motor stocks were easier yesterday, reflecting an anticipated decline in third quarter earnings. Noblitt Sparks lost 1¾. Among the miscellaneous shares to sell down was U. S. Gypsum, which dropped a point on sales of about 1,000 shares. In its semi-annual statement the company reported it saw little prospect of improvement in the building industry during the last half of the year. Dividend requirements were covered in the first half.

Directors of Consumers company have deferred action on the quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the 6 per cent cumulative prior preference, series A, stock, which was due Oct. 1.

The rate on the common stock of the Link Belt company was reduced to 40 cents quarterly, following a reduction to 50 cents from 60 cents three months ago, prior to which the regular quarterly payment was 65 cents.

Openheim, Collins & Co. Earns $2.30 on Common

Oppenheim, Collins & Co., Inc., reports net income of $507,248 for the year ended July 31, equal to $2.30 a common share. This compares with $952,614, or $4.32 a share, in the previous fiscal year.

STEEL REVIEWS NOW REPORT A MILD RECOVERY

Improved Demand Is in Offing.

BY O. A. MATHER.

A mild recovery in the steel industry from the Labor day shutdown and even brighter prospects in the near future are reported by the mid-week steel trade reviews. It is significant that an improved demand is expected from several large industries, which estimates that leaders in these lines believe that general conditions may improve.

There is some difference of opinion as to the rate of activity at the steel mills in the last week. The Iron Age estimates ingot production at 30 per cent of capacity, unchanged from the preceding week. On the other hand, Steel places operations at 32 per cent, compared with 28 per cent the previous week, and Dow-Jones places output at 30 per cent, compared with 25½ per cent previously.

Promising Developments.

Inquiries for 111,000 tons of rails, a total of 54,000 tons of line pipe, increasing activity in structural steel and concrete bars, and growing interest among automobile makers in their forward requirements are promising developments," the Iron Age says. "Inquiries indicate that the annual spring buying movement will soon get under way. While the total purchases by the carriers are likely to be the smallest in recent years, considerable additional tonnage from 1930 is still on the mill books awaiting release.

"The outlook in fabricated steel construction is good for the remainder of the year, in view of the large amount of public works that is coming to a head, and prospects for a revival of private building in 1932 are said to be more definitely promising. Automobile companies and parts makers are sounding out the steel market on their future needs, particularly in steel bars. Several inquiries are for the last quarter, while others call for delivery through the first and second quarters of next year."

Hardware Demand Rises.

An improved call for seasonal goods has brought moderate improvement in hardware and related lines, according to the Hardware Age. An unprecedented demand for canning supplies is reported in several markets. Cold weather is expected to accelerate further the demand for fall and winter lines.

Electric power output for the week ended Sept. 12 fell 8.3 per cent below a year ago, according to the National Electric Light association. However, the comparison is not a true one because the week this year contained Labor day, whereas the corresponding week in 1930 did not contain the holiday. Output for the two weeks ended Sept. 12 showed a recession of only 4½ per cent from last year.

Improvement in business mortality statistics was reported by Bradstreet's Review. Business defaults last week numbered 398. This total compares with 469 in the week before and 853 two weeks previous. In the like week of 1930 there were 429 defaults. There was a decrease in retail insolvencies from 149, or 76.5 per cent of the total in the preceding week, to 269, or 67.6 per cent this week.

Thompson August Sales Increase 11½ Per Cent

John R. Thompson, president of the John R. Thompson company, announced yesterday that August sales showed an increase of 11½ per cent over August, 1930. He also pointed out that the company is carrying out a expansion program costing $2,500,000. The gain is attributed largely to a reduction in prices that added many thousands of customers.

Jewel Tea company, Inc., reports that its sales for the four weeks ending Aug. 8, 1931, were $961,983, as compared with $1,060,493 for the same period in 1930, a decrease of 9.39 per cent. The average number of sales stores for this period was 1,320 in 1931, and 1,348 in 1930.

Great Northern Makes First California Shipment

The first movement of freight out of California over the rails of the Great Northern railway, inaugurating a new transcontinental service, began Tuesday when a train of sixty cars of pine lumber products left McCloud, Cal., over the McCloud River railroad for Lookout, where it was taken over by the Great Northern. The train will be hauled intact to St. Paul, there to be split up and sent to different points, some as far distant as the New England states.

A. O. Smith Corp. Leader in Developing New Steel Uses

BY SCRUTATOR.

An interesting example in American industry where scientific research and economic studies have been combined to secure extraordinary results is found in the A. O. Smith corporation of Milwaukee, which now dominates the transportation pipe manufacturing field, and which may be said to have been in a measure responsible for the recent huge increase in pipe line installations throughout the country. Despite the depression this company has operated on a profitable basis.

It will be recalled that the attention of the financial world was centered on the company a few weeks ago when Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the U. S. Steel company, visited L. R. Smith, its president, at Milwaukee. Reports of a possible merger that arose from the visit have been denied by the interested parties.

Always Looking Ahead.

Since its organization fifty years ago the heads of the Smith company seem to have possessed almost uncanny prescient abilities, though their power to read the future may well have come as a result of their scientific and economic studies.

For instance, the first product of the company's plant was baby buggies. Then the bicycle craze came on and the firm turned to the manufacture of bicycles. Presently there arrived a new contrivance, a horseless buggy People didn't expect a great deal of it.

But among the few who saw the possibilities of the automobile, how it would displace the bicycle and horse and buggy, was A. O. Smith, son of the founder of the Smith company. Mr. Smith, realizing that the automobile would require a frame to carry its motor, gave thought as to what material would best be suitable for its manufacture. Steel was his choice and he set about to design a machine for use in the manufacture of automobile frames.

Pioneer in Auto Frames.

He accomplished his purpose, and in 1902 began the manufacture of ten auomobile frames a day. Of course, the automobile gained in popularity, and the production of frames went up accordingly, but few realised the huge number of cars that were to be built annually after 1920. Mr. Smith must have had some idea, for back before the war he concentrated his attention on the building of a machine which would turn out automobile frames on a wholesale scale and use only a minimum of man power.

He put his staff of engineers to work on his idea and the engineers spent $1,500,000 just in putting the plans on paper. The goal was a machine to produce 10,000 frames a day —a number thought by many to be impossible of absorption. Finally, a frame making machine was completed which represented a total investment of $6,000,000. And dispelling all fears, it worked.

Then came the golden days of the automobile industry following the war. The Smith corporation's $6,000,000 machine turned out its 10,000 frames daily, with only 200 men required to operate it. This output was absorbed by the big automobile firms who also took the output of the older sections of the plant.

During War Days.

Returning a few years in the story to the war days, the plant of the Smith corporation is found making aerial bombs for the United States. The engineers of the company developed a new electric arc welding process to seal the bombs. This process was employed in the manufacture of vessels used by chemical and other firms where ability to withstand high pressure and temperatures were requirements.

Look forward again to a few years back. While on a winter vacation in the south Mr. Smith hit on a plan of folding steel sheets and welding the edges into pipes. Again his engineering department was called into action, and in a few months the manufacture of steel pipe was started.

In this process big sheets of steel were bent into circles by machines and the open seams were arc welded. Previously the old firms were able to turn out only eight miles of steel pipe a day. The Smith organization turned out thirty-two miles a day and then went out and sold the petroleum and gas interests on the cheapness and feasibility of sending their products across the country through pipes. It demonstrated a cheap method of laying pipe in which the use of thirty foot lengths required 134 fewer joints to the mile than the old twenty foot pipe.

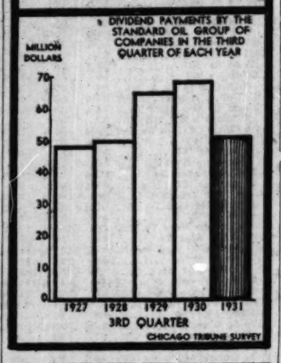
Fortune in Pipe.

So with the automobile industry temporarily in the shade, the Smith corporation has made a fortune through the manufacture of piping ranging from sixteen to twenty-four inches in diameter for general use.

Last year the company completed the construction of a $1,500,000 research building for a staff of engineers ultimately to number 1,000. It is the avowed purpose of the company always to seek out the new in any line of manufacturing endeavor and to scrap immediately any process or device, no matter what the original cost, that has become antiquated.

Its success has stirred the other steel companies to greater effort in the manufacture of steel pipes, but it still dominates the field in the larger sizes of pipes that are now used. And the $6,000,000 machine is ready to start turning out auto frames at capacity when required.

THIRD QUARTER STANDARD OIL DIVIDENDS ARE AT 1928 LEVEL



SHORT LINES REQUEST FAVORABLE ACTION ON RAIL RATE BOOST

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A plea for favorable action on the railroads' petition for a 15 per cent freight rate increase on the ground that they had disclosed "a situation of national peril" was made to the interstate commerce commission today by 153 short lines.

A brief filed by the short lines, while indicating a willingness to exempt farm products from the increase, asserted the commission was obligated to grant higher rates when railroads show the need for such action in order to keep their income close to the 5¾ per cent return allowed by law.

Two other groups filed statements at the same time opposing any increase. One, presented on behalf of 350 firms producing 110 commodities, urged that no increases be granted beyond the eastern class rates which become effective Dec. 3. It blamed much of the diversion of freight from railroads to trucks on "hand to mouth" buying and said two subsidiaries of eastern roads were adopting motor transportation for economic reasons.

The second protestant was the Youngstown Chamber of Commerce. It urged that coal, iron ore, limestone, coke, scrap iron or steel, and finished steel products be exempted on the ground that an increase on these articles would divert business from the Youngstown area to great lakes competitors.

Westinghouse Electric Co. Pays Dividend of 62½c

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Directors of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, meeting today for dividend action, authorized a quarterly disbursement of 62½ cents a share on the common and preferred stocks, compared with the previous rate of $1, established last April, when the amount was reduced from $1.25 quarterly.

Announcement of this dividend took the street by surprise, as demonstrated by the spirited advance of 3 points in the common stock following the news. The common had been weak all morning, selling down to a new low record on widespread beliefs that the board might act to omit the dividend entirely.

Payment of today's dividend will make a total of 7½ per cent paid this year on both classes of $50 par value stock, which compares with 10 per cent in 1930. The preferred stock is cumulative and is entitled to 7 per cent before any payments are made on the common. After the common receives the equivalent of 7 per cent, or $3.50 year, both stocks share equally in further payments.

Cites Reduced Earnings.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board, said that in view of the reduced earnings of the company this year "it was not thought advisable to pay more than this rate of dividend at this time." Both dividends are payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 30.

The Kansas City Southern railway decided today to omit dividend payments on the common stock. The regular payment of $1 a share was declared on the preferred stock.

Common stock of the company paid an initial dividend at the rate of $5 annually in May of 1929. Payment of $1.25 quarterly was reduced to 50 cents last June. The road earned only $2.04 a share on the common last year and earnings for the first seven months of this year were substantially below 1930 figures.

Several other important railroad meetings are expected within the next week. Northern Pacific is scheduled to act on Sept. 23, while Reading will take action on its dividend the following day. Some revision is expected by the street in the quarterly disbursments of both roads.

Directors of Pullman, Inc., postponed action on the quarterly dividend until Oct. 14.

Omits Dividend.

The board of Madison Square Garden corporation has omitted payment of the dividend of 15 cents a share due on the capital stock at this time in order to conserve cash resources.

Operations of the company and its wholly owned subsidiaries for the August quarter, the first quarter of the current fiscal year, showed a loss of $314,833 after all charges, compared with a loss of $74,468 in the same period last year.

The Tennessee corporation has passed its quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a share in order to conserve the company's assets. The usual extra dividend of 10 cents a share and the regular quarterly of 65 cents were announced on the common stock of Loose-Wiles Biscuit company. Title Guarantee and Trust company voted the usual extra disbursement of 60 cents and the regular quarterly of $1.20. The Globe Grain and Milling company has omitted its quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share due at this time on the common stock.

Directors of the American Commonwealths Power corporation declared today the initial monthly dividends on the customer ownership $6.24 series of prior preferred stock at the rate of 52 cents a share monthly for the final three months of 1931.

AMERICAN BAR LEADERS PROBE PRESENT SLUMP

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Leaders of the American bar today assailed federal interference in business, urged relaxation of the anti-trust laws and otherwise plunged into a detailed examination of the economic depression.

They were preparing for the opening tomorrow of the annual convention of the bar association.

Robert H. Jackson, New York lawyer, attacked present conditions in the utilities securities field, warning that the investor must be protected, perhaps by state regulation.

"We have too many power securities which have little to do with power and less with security," he said.

Ross C. Butler, chairman of the commerce committee assailed the anti-trust laws, charging they ignore "economic considerations, even threatening the producer with imprisonment if he agrees to limit his production to the needs of his fellowmen."

James D. Francis of Huntington, W. Va., vice president of the Island Creek Coal company, raised a dissenting voice in arguments against the anti-trust laws. He said that coal operators were too individualistic to coöperate, and that the same spirit enervated most lines of American business.

FIVE CLOSED BANKS IN TOLEDO MAY GET USE OF $25,000,000

Toledo, O., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Use of $25,000,000 in federal reserve funds to assist in untangling the banking situation here became a probability late today as the first encouraging news reached the 150,000 depositors who have more than 100 million dollars tied up in the five closed banks.

Under a plan outlined to Wilbur M. White, congressman from this district; Eugene Meyer Jr., chairman of the federal reserve board in Washington, has asked the reserve banks of Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati to consider a plan whereby sufficient money can be poured into Toledo to release at least part of the millions tied up since the banks failed 1 June and August.

Roughly the plan calls for the payment of an immediate dividend of approximately 20 per cent to the 150,000 depositors. It also was interpreted by bankers here as opening the way for the reorganization of one strong bank out of the wreckage of the five.

The advantage of such a plan would be to have the new bank liquidate the slow paper that forced the banks to close and accomplish this task at a saving over the expensive liquidation likely if the state banking department is forced to realize on all assets as quickly as possible.

SWIFT & CO. VOTE 10% REDUCTION IN ALL SALARIES

Swift & Co., packers, announced yesterday a 10 per cent reduction in pay of all salaried employes. The reduction is effective Sept. 28. Similar reductions have previously been made by other large packing houses.

Return to Work.

Putnam, Conn., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Their efforts to gain shorter working hours at slight increases in pay unsuccessful after a two months' strike, 850 workers at two local silk mills today prepared to return to work. The employés voted to return last night. The Edward Bloom company mill was expected to resume operations Monday; while the M. Salzberg Sons & Co. plant, where a skeleton force has been employed, will give work to part of its staff today, with the rest returning tomorrow.

White Star Line Reports $167,000 Loss for 1930

LONDON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The White Star line tonight reported a loss of $167,000 for the year ended Dec. 1, 1930. Interest charges are provided for in the report, but no provision is made for depreciation.

"No dividend," said the report, "has been received from the operating company, viz., the Oceanic Steam Navigation company.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Stocks had numerous little rallying spells today but some fresh hindrance was encountered at every turn and the close found prices generally lower than they have been in years. Utility and railroad shares found the going particularly difficult.

"Adverse dividend actions by the Kansas City Southern railway, Westinghouse Manufacturing, and other big corporations, predictions of further curtailment of steel production by the weekly trade reviews and a rather disappointing carloadings report showing nothing better than a seasonal pickup were the drawbacks of the day.

As Bearish as Ever.

Sentiment in the motor car industry appeared to be a bit more cheerful, although commentators agreed that production next month will slow down, preliminary to the introduction of new models but the stocks of the various companies got little aid from the development. The street, obviously is as bearish as ever and talk of a "selling climax" as a necessary sequel to the long downward movement of prices continued to be heard on all sides. Final prices in the main were around the lowest of the day.

A sudden "squeeze" in Westinghouse Electric, developing just before directors went into session for dividend consideration at 11 o'clock today, served to give the market a welcome respite from selling, which had been in order for the best part of the last fortnight.

Offerings Dry Up.

The stock had dropped to a new low for the decline soon after the opening and had scored a recovery of more than a point when suddenly it was found nearby offerings had dried up. It was moving around 45⅝ when the shout went up from brokerage wire rooms "49 bid for Westinghouse." The next sale was 100 shares at 46, and the following sale 100 shares at 49. Then it was reported "51 bid for Westinghouse," but that price was never reached. A heavy volume of "short" stop orders was caught at 49, but the flow of offerings seemed sufficient to take care of the demand at that level.

The closing sale was at 47⅝ which was nearly 2 points better than yesterday's final figure on the stock.

General Electric was given a hard run on the news of Westinghouse's dividend cut and talk of a possible reduction in its own rate when its board of directors meet next. In the last three days three electrical equipment companies have omitted or cut their dividends, and the market naturally concludes that the electrical business is faring rather poorly.

Early Spurt in Rails.

The rails had a little spurt in the early trading and recovered some of their losses, but the show of enthusiasm in their behalf petered out when the Kansas City Southern dividend news

Fairbanks, Morse & Co.

I hold a Fairbanks, Morse 5 per cent debenture, due 1942, purchased at around $96. The market price of this security showed a marked decline, due, I presume, to an unfavorable earnings report. Is it sound? It was purchased for income purposes and need not be sold.—P. C. C.

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. was founded in 1891. It first attained prominence as a manufacturer of scales, but has since diversified its output by manufacturing Diesel engines, various types of internal combustion engines, dynamos, windmills, and home lighting plants.

Sales were comparatively stable in the period from 1925 through 1929, varying from a low of about $28,400,000 in 1927 to a high of $31,500,000 in 1926. Sales of $24,126,049 in 1930 reflected the effect of general business conditions.

In 1930 interest charges were earned 3.76 times, against 9.62 times in 1929, 7.62 times in 1928, and 6.92 times in 1927.

Operating profit for the first half of 1931 was $21,418, against $1,547,567 for the corresponding 1930 period. Depreciation was $404,952 and interest was $176,000. Net loss, after all charges, was $559,534.

For the first half of 1930 depreciation was $372,790 and interest was $184,000. Deducting these charges, pension fund, and federal taxes, net profit, after all deductions, was $803,461.

On Dec. 31, 1930, current assets were $21,899,895, and current liabilities were $2,138,610. Ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 10.2 to 1, against 6.8 to 1 the year before. Working capital was $19,761,285, against $22,144,693 on Dec. 31, 1929.

The company's funded debt consists solely of $6,883,500 sinking fund debenture 5s, due 1942. Sinking fund provisions provide that at least $320,000 debentures be retired each year, sufficient to redeem at least 52 per cent by maturity. They are a business man's risk.

Southern United Gas.

Will you kindly give me your opinion on Southern United Gas company first 6s, due April 1, 1937?—H. M.

Southern United Gas company is controlled by United Public Service company, one of a group controlled by Middle West Utilities company. Through subsidiaries natural gas is furnished to a number of towns in Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Gross earnings for 1930 were $429,963, against $505,533 in 1929, $553,750 in 1928, and $635,845 in 1927.

Funded debt consists solely of $1,997,700 first lien sinking fund 6s, series A, due April 1, 1937. They are secured by a direct first lien on all indebtedness and entire capital stock of all subsidiaries.

They are somewhat speculative.

115 Fire Insurance Firms to Have a Landis of Own

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 16.—The Hartford Courant reports that forty executive, representing 115 fire insurance companies, have decided to appoint a general executive to be given broad powers in deciding general policies for all companies represented. The executive, or president of the Insurance Executives' association, formed by the forty executives, will be given almost dictatorial powers, the paper said, with a relationship to the fire insurance industry similar to that of Kenesaw Mountain Landis to baseball and Will Hays to the motion picture industry.

WHEAT PRICES ADVANCE AGAIN; CORN IS STEADY

Hear Chinese May Require Large Grain Supply.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Increasing signs that the world's wheat market is commencing to more accurately reflect the changing character of the supply and demand situation were in evidence yesterday, prices advancing to a new high on the current movement for the nearby deliveries with the September selling at 58c, or the best figure since Aug. 17.

While there appeared to be plenty of wheat for sale on the advances and by holders of daily and weekly offers, the breaks found ample support and the finish was at net gains of ⅛@1c with September closing at 49¾c; December, 51⅛c, and May, 55⅝@55¾c.

A Broomhall cable saying a Chinese economic society had announced that 4,000,000 tons or 735,000,000 bu wheat would be needed for flood relief attracted a great deal of attention and was regarded as indicating that there was a latent world's demand for grain which might develop suddenly.

It was the belief in some quarters that if later developments confirmed this amount of wheat was needed the farm board might be able to make tremendous sales, and cut down its holdings to such an extent the remaining unsold portion of its stock would no longer be a burden on the market.

World's Wheat Stocks Smaller.

In some quarters doubt was expressed as to whether any country other than the United States was in a position to furnish any such quantity of wheat mentioned in the Chinese cable, especially at a price within the bounds of reason, and the peculiar favorable position in which the government finds itself caused some comment. The world's total available supply of wheat for the 1931-'32 season, as near as can be estimated, including the carry over, is 4,295,000,000 bu, or nearly 200,000,000 bu less than the previous year, when the actual disappearance was around 3,325,000,000 bu.

Reports that Russia had withdrawn offerings of spring wheat abroad; locusts in Argentine, and the poor quality of the remaining Argentine exportable surplus all had some effect on sentiment yesterday, and helped along the upturn in wheat futures. Liverpool ignored the decline in North America on Tuesday and closed unchanged to ¼d higher, with October closing at 55⅝c, or 6c over Chicago September. Winnipeg was ⅞@1c higher, with October closing at 53c.

Export demand for North American wheat yesterday was fairly active, with sales of around 600,000 bu in all positions, in addition to which there was 300,000 bu hard winter sold to Greece at the gulf on Tuesday.

Corn Reacts from Bulge.

Local professionals were on the buying side of corn early and with a lack of aggressive selling prices advanced ⅝@1c over Tuesday's finish. Selling against offers checked the bulge and toward the last there was selling of December which the trade regarded as by a leading operator. The close was at intermediate prices with September ⅝c higher and the deferred months ⅛@⅞c higher. September finished at 44¾c, December 39c, and May 42⅝c. Little attention was paid to the improved shipping demand with sales of 141,000 bu.

Oats market again showed a strong undertone and closed ⅛@¼c higher, the September and May selling at a new high on the current upturn, with commission houses and locals fair buyers.

September rye sold up to 40⅝c yesterday, the highest price since June 30, showing 2¼c above the recent low, and the May at 43¼c was at a new high since trading started in that delivery. The close was ½@¾c higher with September at 40¼c; December, 40⅝c, and May, 42¼c.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Fear Earnings Slump.

Weakness in the preferred stocks of American and Foreign Power has been accompanied by rumors in Wall street of a further slump in earnings.

Improved Technical Position.

A great deal of necessitous liquidation has been completed in Electric Bond and Share during the last few days. This has resulted in an improved technical position.

Little Pressure Noted.

Walgreen has not been particularly active of late, but there has been, at the same time, no special pressure to sell the stock. Latest estimates regarding business of the corporation indicate that sales for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1931, will be about $54,000,000. A profit of about $1.75 a share.

"Heitler Letter" Accusing Gangsters No Aid to Officials—Land Pacific Flyers on Siberian Island

LAWRENCE MANGANO. ROCCO FANELLI. JAMES ADDUCI.

MEN NAMED IN STORY OF VICE, CRIME, AND GRAFT. Seven of the principal gang leaders who figure in the recital which purports to be a statement of Michael (Mike de Pike) Heitler, compiled before he was murdered last April. He named several as ones to be blamed if he were killed. (Story on page 1.)

GETS MESSAGE. Frances Bresson, Riverside, Cal., to whom Don Moyle reported his safety. (Story on page 1.)

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

SLAIN ALKY DEALER AND HIS WIDOW. Carlo Piazzo, who was found slain in auto at 77th street and Laramie avenue, and his widow, who believed he was auto mechanic. (Story on page 9.)
